Dog Plays Cupid; Couple Meet and Wed-but Dog Dies

A happy little romance culminating in the wedding of Gus Hill and Miss Betty Brooks on Saturday was handled dexterously by Dan Cupid through an agent who couldn't even talk it up.

Mr. Hill, who for a number of years has been employed at the Peters market, 734 Elm street, Winnetka, has been, throughout that time a daily visitor at the Chambers cafe, on Center street for his luncheons and dinners.

It was here, some time ago he first saw his bride, who is proprietress of the Betty Brooks Beauty parlors, just

The admiration for each was mutual and only a few weeks ago Mr. Hill had arranged with a friend for a formal introduction.

But impatient cupid would not wait lished." for this formality at a time when the it happened this way:

according to her custom, had taken vited, her little pet dog out for a walk. Mr. Hill was coming down the street from the opposite direction.

The little dog saw him and raced up to him with a friendly greeting, as if to say:

"Hello Gus, I'm so glad to see you." Gus petted the dog, Miss Brooks came up-and well-that's all.

Except, the poor little dog died a few days ago, the only sad part of the romance.

Mr. Hill and Miss Brooks were married last Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, by Rev. E. Ashley Gerhard, at Christ Episcopal church Parish House. They were accompanied by Mrs. Richard LaFleur and Arthur Kastner.

Mr. Hill and his bride have been spending their honeymoon in Duluth this week.

to begin with he held alone. It constituted the first great advance made Holland of 679 Hill road, when they among the Christian people since the death of Jesus. And Paul, among the apostles, not only held it alone, but alone he had to make it good. If the difficulty of traveling in his time be considered, with the fact that he had to finance himself and work without the sanction of many of the older and more conservative apostles, it is probably true to say that the work he did in taking the Christian church over from the Jewish enviornment, and planting it around the corner, at 817 Elm street. | firmly in the Greek-Roman civilization where the Christian tradition could come on down to the modern world was the most difficult and the most significant piece of work that any one Christian missionary has ever accomp-

Peach Twigs and Scientific Planning

THE peach twig dips downheld over underground water supplies. So firm is the faith of some people in its supposed infallibility that they never undertake the labor and expense of digging a well without making a test for hidden water with this natural divining rod.

In preparing for the growth of telephone facilities to meet future demands, there is no peachtwig substitute for foresight. All expenditures of labor and money must be based on scientific planning. Careful studies must be ward, so many believe, when made of present and future conditions in the locality to be served. Probable population and the volume and nature of telephone traffic must be estimated years ahead. Plant must be made capable of expansion. Capital must be arranged for in advance if growth is not to be delayed.

One of the vital phases of the Bell System's task of providing America with a nation-wide universal service is that of foreseeing and providing for the future needs of the nation.
