Rollin Pease Sings
American Music at MacDowell Society

Rollin Pease was the artist of the evening at the meeting of the North Shore MacDowell society on Tuesday, November 16, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Dwight Orcutt, 185 Green Bay road.

Frank W. Ambler, president of the society, read a message to the society describing the ideal of Peterboro colony as dreamed by MacDowell and later brought into being by his wife, and formulating the purpose of the MacDowell societies in their support of the colony.

Mr. Pease, who was accompanied by Miss Electra Austin at the piano gave very beautifully a portrayal of creative work in America by poets as well as musicians. For his first group of songs all had words by well known American or English poets. His enunciation combined with the power and beauty of his voice made them a delight to his audience. Particularly beautiful were "My True Love Lies Asleep," by Lisette Reese with music by Eugene Murdock, "Trade Winds," by Masfield with music by Frederick Keel, and "Sunset" by Sidney Lanier with music by Dudley Buck.

Mr. Pease also gave songs in Scotch and Dorsetshire dialects. Miss Austin finished this splendid musical program by playing the C Major Rhapsody by Dohnanyi and a Brahms waltz.

The North Shore MacDowell society is a vital and growing organization and an exponent of the interest which America is beginning to take in her creative artists.

A telephone and electrical equipment manufacturing plant at Hawthorne, regarded as one of the state's largest plants, consumes enough gas monthly to fuel a city the size of Rockford.
