Mausoleum Recalls the Glory of Ancient Greece

The acacia mausoleum on Irving Park boulevard, which is regarded as one of the finest examples of monumental architecture in the country, is nearing completion. It is set in a park which is reminiscent of the golden age of Athens. A pool which is an exact restoration of a classical garden pool will stand before the mausoleum entrance. It will be built of lacquered Georgia marble, and will contain a graceful fountain, illuminated at night. The mausoleum is typically Doric in architecture and is made of Georgia marble, wax finished, except for the pilasters which are polished. Since the mausoleum and the park are for the exclusive use of Masons and their families, Masonic symbolism is exemplified in the broad flight of steps leading to the entrance and in other architectural features of the structure.

We know now what we want for Christmas—a nice 1927 auto license.

Most any man will lose his religion and cuss and swear when his furnace puffs in his face. We know because we've heard 'em. But when you burn Solvay Coke you can maintain a nice sweet even disposition all the time.

We know a man who doesn't get his whiskers shaved off evenly and he leaves little black patches on the sides of his neck.

The William Salmen Co. is building to sell a six-room English style residence on 17th street south of Wilmette avenue. This home will be thoroughly insulated with Balsam Wave and should prove very popular.

The other day we spoke to a friend of ours and he seemed cold and distant. Then we discovered the trouble. He had a boil on his neck.

The most sensible preparation for winter we can think of is storm doors and windows; we have just received a supply of each which we think will be hard to beat and the price is right too.

Ever hear about the colored minister who announced that "on account o' Monday comin' on Tuesday nex' Wednesday, de regular meeting' of de Friday Night Club has been postponed f'um Saturday to Sunday night!"

"Doc." Patchen's Christmas suggestion: "Don't buy us a book. We've already got one."
