

Lord's

FOUNTAIN SQUARE
EVANSTON
University 1024
Wilmette 600

The Book in the Role of Christmas Gift

A WANDERER IN ROME
E. V. Lucas
Doran $5.00

THE WORLD'S BEST SHORT STORIES of 1926
Selected by 17 Famous Editors
Doran $2.50

THE OUTLINE OF HISTORY
H. G. Wells
Macmillan. New Pictorial Edition; Two Volumes. Set $15.00

JEFFERSON AND HAMILTON
Claude G. Bowers
Houghton, Mifflin Co. $5.00

OUR TIMES: THE TURN OF THE CENTURY
Mark Sullivan
Scribner's $5.00

THE COMEDIANS
Louis Couperus
Doran $2.50

EDUCATION AND THE GOOD LIFE
Bertrand Russell
Boni & Liveright $2.50

HARMER JOHN
Hugh Walpole
Doran $2.00

MRS. MERIVALE
Paul Kimball
Clode $2.00

TRAIL-MAKERS OF THE MIDDLE BORDER
Hamlin Garland
Macmillan $2.50

Ordering your Christmas Greeting Cards here assures you of excellent service and satisfaction.

Lord's--West Davis Street Entrance

NEWEST BOOKS AND BOOK REVIEWS

DID YOU KNOW—

That Louis Untermeyer has collected a volume of parodies which is most interesting and fairly complete?

That the ten-cent thrillers of forty years ago, which boys read secretly are being acquired by book collectors?

That Bernard Shaw is reputed to be the wealthiest literary craftsman today?

That "The Wind" by Dorothy Scarborough is to be produced in the movies with Lillian Gish taking one of the leading characters?

That thirty years were spent by William Dana Orcutt in his "quest of the perfect book?"

It would seem that Ernest Hemingway, author of "The Sun Also Rises," would be competent to describe bull fights, having had three ribs broken himself in the arena.

James Bone, author of the fascinating "London Perambulator," has done the same for Edinburgh. We hope he has done it as well.

TIDES

By Ada & Julian Street

A surging novel of Chicago in the days of the World's Fair.
Doubleday, Page & Co. $2.00

SHERWOOD ANDERSON'S

latest book

TAR

A MIDWEST CHILDHOOD

In the mood of the author's great book "A Story Teller's Story" it is one of the most understanding records ever written of a happy childhood.

At all bookstores, $3.00

Boni & Liveright N. Y.

First Editions and Rare Books

Write for our AUTUMN CATALOGUE—just off the press.

THE WALDEN BOOK SHOPS
410 No. Michigan Ave.
307 Plymouth Court
CHICAGO

Popular Books

(December Bookman)

Fiction

- Show Boat Ferber
- The Silver Spoon Galsworthy
- The Private Life of Helen of Troy Erskine
- An American Tragedy Dreiser
- Gentlemen Prefer Blondes Loos
- Beau Sabreur Wren
- The Blue Window Bailey
- Beau Geste Wren
- Her Son's Wife Canfield
- The Exquisite Perdita Barrington
- Sorgell and Son Deeping
- Wild Geese Ostensio

General

- Why We Behave Like Human Beings Dorsey
- The Man Nobody Knows Barton
- The Story of Philosophy Durant
- The Book Nobody Knows Barton
- Abraham Lincoln Sandburg
- The Mauve Decade Beer
- Our Times Sullivan
- Arcturus Adventure Beebe
- Microbe Hunters de Kruif
- The Revolt of Modern Youth Evans
- Jefferson and Hamilton Bowers
- The Royal Road to Romance Halliburton

Salads Discussed

A unique book which should appeal to the housewife as well as to the caterer has come to our notice—the Edgewater Beach Hotel Salad Book.

A foreword by the author, Arnold Shircliffe, Caterer and assistant manager of the Edgewater Beach hotel, is illuminating on this subject and recipes which follow, over two hundred pages, range from those for persons who are on a diet to salads which would satisfy people of the most epicurean tastes. Four color illustrations of sixteen different salads, which are actual photographs, accompany the recipes and are wonderfully natural.

The de luxe binding, together with the attractive text and illustrations, makes it a book which is a joy to read, as well as one which gives practical information on that most important item on the menu—the salad.

An immediate hit!

MISSISSIPPI STEAMBOATIN'

By Herbert and Edward Quick

Here is the story of a great smashing, splendid epoch in the building of America. Destined to become a classic.

Fully Illustrated, 3.00

Henry Holt & Co. N. Y.

American Twins of The Revolution

Lucy Fitch Perkins

Another delightful volume for children by the popular author of the Twin Series. Illustrated. $1.75.

Houghton Mifflin Co.

Reviews of New Books

"ON THE TRAIL OF MAN"—Roy Chapman Andrews.

Roy Chapman Andrews in his "On the Trail of Ancient Man," has written not scientifically but informally the story of his Central Asiatic Expedition's work in Mongolia. It opens up a new world to the layman who, it is likely, will never have a chance to go travelling off into Gobi Desert where sand and camels and bandits are the only scenery, except for flaming cliffs and painted deserts and nameless snow capped peaks and various wild animals unknown elsewhere in the world.

Mr. Andrews feels all this part of the romance as well as the immense thrill of finding the first known dinosaur eggs and traces of a hitherto unknown tribe of man. This wandering life is one which he chose above all others, if he could not have followed it he says that in an office he thinks he "would have sickened and died." He makes us understand the fascination and the necessity which have led him on.

—ESTHER GOULD.

"Letters to My Daughter"

"Letters to My Daughter" is the latest addition to the books by Winnetka authors. Although published anonymously it is an open secret in Chicago and north shore literary circles that the author is Leslie J. Swabacker who has long been a resident in the village.

While this is the first book that he has published, Mr. Swabacker is well known as a critic and book reviewer both under his own name and also under the pseudonym of John Philip Morris.

Several years ago he found time in the midst of his various activities to start the literary page of this paper and was its first editor, serving in this capacity for over a year.

The "Letters" are a series of essays in the form of letters to be read by his daughter when she reaches the age of 18. They are neither the usual Pollyannaish platitudes nor are they the ordinary sort of instruction in physiology. Instead they cover all these subjects but are written from the viewpoint of a man of the world who desires his daughter to see and know things as they actually are.

This being the case the book will be interesting reading to everyone, starting to many and anathema to a few. They have already created a great deal of discussion and the book will be one that is widely read and talked about this winter.

In most cases indeed, we no longer need pity the poor author. Valentine Williams, whose novel "The Key Man" was recently published by Houghton Mifflin, has returned from London to Cannes for the winter, where he does most of his writing in a kiosk (whatever that is) perched on the edge of a cliff so close to the sea that if he splits an infinitive he says half of it would fall into the Mediterranean.