BY JEAN TEN BROECK

The part mothers along the north shore are desirous of playing in the holiday lives of their sons and daughters is represented in the north shore women who are to be the patronesses for the big homecoming party to be given as a north shore junior event Thursday evening, December 23, in the thurs ballroom of the Orrington hotel. This group, we are informed this week, is composed of Mrs. Frederick E. Clarke, Mrs. William T. Cresmer, Mrs. J. Milton Trainer, Mrs. Edward H. Cassels, Mrs. George L. Emerich, and Mrs. James M. We are told that tentative plans for a number of dinners are being made, but at this time just one is definite, that to be given by Mrs. William T. Cresmer of Glencoe for her daughter, Miss Wilma.

Vested Choir Sings at Wedding of Emily Scott

One of the most beautiful weddings in the Winnetka Congregational church was that of Emily Carol Langdon Hubbard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Hubbard of Grosse Point, Mich., took place last Saturday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

The service was read by the Rev. James Austin Richards before the lily-banked altar and walls of southern smilax through which only the stained glass window above the music loft was visible. The white robed choir of St. Augustine's Episcopal church, with hymnals encased in scarlet leather, sang the wedding march and St. Anselm's wedding song, "O Love Divine and Golden."

The entire church edifice was lighted only by clusters of three tall cathedral candles in tall wrought iron holders placed at each side of the altar. The bride was attired in shimmering cream chiffon velvet, soft and lustrous, with old rose point lace that has been in the family for many years, a conventional court train, and veil of tulle. Gardenias and valley lilies composed her bouquet.

The gowns of the attendants, Miss Isabel Scott, maid of honor, Mrs. Donald Welles, matron of honor, and the five maids, Miss Edith Fairbanks, Miss Louise Tyler, Miss Joan Stuart, Miss Laura Towne of Washington, and Miss Romayne Warren of Detroit, were of flame-color taffeta fashioned with bouffant skirts short in front, long in back. Their slippers were of flame-color satin, their hats of brown tulle and velvet, and they carried bouquets of sunset roses and mixed flowers. The bride's mother, Mrs. Frederick Scott, wore black and gold chiffon, and her grandmother, Mrs. Robert Cluett, was in black velvet.

Bartow Heminway of Watertown, Conn., acted as best man, and ushering were Thomas Paddock, George Hendrie, William Muir, all of Detroit, and Frederick H. Scott, Jr., John P. Wilson, Jr., and Albert Keep.

The wedding reception was held at the close of the ceremony in the Scott residence on Sheridan road.
