SPACIOUS DANCE FLOOR
IN BUNGALOW ON ROOF

Windows, Awnings, Glazed Walls
Give the Effect of an Outdoor Court

Representing a Spanish patio, the ballroom of the new Georgian hotel, Evanston, achieves the effect through appropriate furnishings and its location. In the bungalow on the top of the hotel, the ballroom has windows on all sides which help in making the scene of the room an outdoor court.

The glazed walls of the room approximate in color the light exteriors of Spanish dwellings. The lower four feet of the walls harmonize with the Spanish note by the use of small Spanish figures arranged in squares.

The sunny atmosphere peculiar to the style which the room represents is augmented by the use of light striped canopies over the entrances and windows and on the benches. Subdued orange and red stripe the awnings over the windows and doors while a blue, green and yellow combination is used to upholster the benches. The benches line all the walls.

The orchestra's terrace in the northwest corner of the ballroom is covered with a large awning. In the back of the tent is a colonnade which supposedly looks out toward the sky. The facade.

Spanish spears support the awnings. The entrances to the room take the form of doors in exterior aspect. The effect of a heavy stone casing surrounding the opening is accomplished by painted, ornamental celotex. On the "keystone" of each entrance is the coat of arms of the Georgian.

Large mirrors, here and there on the walls, enrich the room. Lighting fixtures are on and dark sky, light stars, and moon appear "outside" of the colonnades are beautiful crystal chandeliers.

A checkroom is conveniently located to the side of the main entrance. A kitchen immediately off the ballroom provides service for dinner dances or light refreshments.

Panorama of Lake, Trees
Seen from Georgian Roof

The Georgian hotel, one of the highest buildings in Evanston, affords a remarkable view of the lake front and surrounding territory when observed from the roof. Stretching out in a beautiful panorama may be seen the winding beach line with its many piers, with the Municipal pier, the Wrigley building, the Tribune tower and the taller buildings of the loop easily seen on clear days.

Looking northward one can see the Gross Point lighthouse, University hall, Patten gymnasium, the First Methodist church and other of Evanston's beautiful structures. Sheridan road with its twists and turns can be followed for miles up the shore.

From the roof of the Georgian, Evanston is a city of trees.

COMMISSARY SERVICE

The Georgian hotel maintains a commissary for its guests from which cooked or uncooked foods may be obtained at a minimum price. The management also provides a catering service to undertake the preparation and serving of luncheons or dinners.

Mrs. Carl Keith, 310 Warwick road, will return to Kenilworth on Saturday from a week's visit with her sister, Miss Bessie Alling of New York.
