What is the Definition of "HARDWARE"

WEBSTER SAYS: "Articles manufactured from Metals - Wood - Rubber and Compositions"

One of our most prominent merchants of this country says—

The average hardware merchant limits his stocks to Household supplies and tools, which of course include paints, glass, garden supplies and practical toys, together with the services applying to these items, such as sharpening tools, replacing broken panes of glass, lock repairing, etc. They have recently added electrical supplies to their stock, but do not service this, in most instances. The hardware merchant seems to have completely forgotten that a large majority of his buyers of today are in constant need of Automobile Supplies and Service, which the up-to-date-hardware store should include."
