

Thousands Mourn Passing of Dilg, First Waltonian (Contributed)

The death of Will H. Dilg, founder of the Izaak Walton League of America, was noted in the papers last week. Back of this lies the story of a great ideal brought to the public's attention but a few years ago and that developed almost overnight into a powerful organization, nation-wide in scope, and surprising in the constructive work that it has already accomplished.

Dilg, an advertising man, with a keen sense of the dramatic, with an unbounded enthusiasm, and a supreme belief in the idea, found a ready response in every part of the country, from men who loved the woods, men who loved the waters, men who loved the mountains, or the valleys, men who loved the wild life found therein, and he welded these into a national organization having local chapters running into the thousands, and an individual membership counted by the hundreds of thousands.

One of the leagues' accomplishments is the "Wild Game Refuge" bordering the Mississippi river and touching three states. It has been suggested that Will Dilg's final resting place be on one of the high hills looking out over the river and this Game Refuge. It would seem that a fitting memorial there, to the man, and the ideal, would become a shrine to all lovers of this fair country our ours.

Dean Dennis Proves Evanston Ideal Suburb

Dean Ralph B. Dennis of the Northwestern School of Speech won the silver loving cup in the Rotarian contest for choosing the best Chicago suburb, at the Hotel Sherman Tuesday. The judges held that Dean Dennis, speaking for Evanston in behalf of Evanston Rotary, had proved his home town superior to its rivals. Pitted against him were orators from Wilmette, Oak Park, Cicero and other suburbs. Dean Dennis acclaimed the classic town as famous for two women, Frances Willard and Hell'n Maria.
