

Horace Mann School Stages Master Bazaar

Oh My!—And How!

A record crowd jammed the halls of the Horace Mann school at the Bazaar which was given by the Parent-Teacher association for the purpose of raising money to outfit the school manual training department. The greater number of the children were featured in one or more of the programs given as a part of the entertainment and as it will be noticed, were quite dressed up.

Just to ward off a misconception, the little boy in the upper photo—fourth from the left—is not making faces at the cameraman; he has a whistle in his mouth. And the sign on the booth in the same picture is not warning people against feeding the monkeys but says that the pottery on display is for sale.

The Dutch cottage at the lower right, including fireplace and genuine wooden shoes is, under ordinary circumstances, where Miss Julian tells her third graders that it's most necessary to get to school on time and that and 2 doesn't equal sixteen.

Local Girl Wins Place in Carleton May Fete

Mary Hill, 391 Sheridan road, Winnetka, has been chosen as one of the principals in the Carleton college May fete, to be presented on May 21, with the Carleton Lyman Memorial lakes as stage setting and background.

The Carleton May fete, which succeeds each year in attracting thousands of visitors to the college, is one of the outstanding events of its kind in the Northwest, and includes, in the roles of principals and dancers, practically every girl at Carleton.

The plot of the pageant this year is adapted from an old Arabian tale, being the story of the Arabian slave girl, Tuhfeh, a beautiful flute player, and her lover, who rescues her from exciting situations in the market place and in the land of Sins, and who finally succeeds in bringing her back to the Land of the Mortals.
