

HOSPITAL IS PRAISED

Evanston Institution's Work in Mending Disabled by Occupational Treatment Is Paid High Compliment

The opinion that if the Evanston hospital were doing no other one thing than aiding the physically handicapped through its department of occupational therapy it would be more than justifying its existence, was carried away from the annual luncheon of the hospital auxiliary held Monday at the Evanston hotel.

The mother of a little patient in the department, Elizabeth Kimball of Lake Forest, described the manner in which the child and others aided by the department, had had new life and light brought to them by means of it, and fascinated her hearers with her impressions of its far-reaching scope and the importance it plays in rehabilitation—economically, as an impetus to service and an agent of good cheer.

Newer things of interest among hospital activities were given attention by speakers introduced by Mrs. James A. Patten, president of the auxiliary, who presided at the business meeting following the luncheon. The converting of a cottage on the grounds into an excellently-equipped chemical laboratory and library for use in the educational work of nurses and doctors, was one of the items discussed. Miss Thompson of the staff outlined this project. Mrs. Williams, the librarian, brought a plea for gifts of books or money to buy books for the hospital library which the Junior League directs, and for volunteer workers for Friday afternoon once a month between 2 and 4 to aid with the book distribution "Best Sellers," mystery and detective stories, children's books, romances are especially desired.

It was announced that June will be the auxiliary's benefit month at Thrift house and members were urged to contribute articles for sale at that time. They may be left at any time at the home of Mrs. Patten where they will be taken care of until June, it was announced.

Joyce Kilmer Players to Present "Conquered" Here

Wednesday, May 11, the Joyce Kilmer Players, Chicago's foremost Catholic dramatic guild, will occupy the stage at the Evanston Country club for one special performance of "Conquered," a new play in four acts by William Roeder.

The play concerns itself with modern American society life, filled with romance, bigotry and intrigue. It is the story of Warren Trude, a confirmed atheist whose little son is hopelessly crippled for life; of Mary Rielly, his nurse, whose principles are stronger than her loves; of Mrs. VanEllsworth, society woman with a tarnished past and a beaten path to the divorce courts behind her; Grant Conley, a negative character of the "flaming youth" type; and Dora, the maid. The production is being sponsored by St. Nicholas parish, Evanston and St. Joseph's parish, Wilmette. Tickets can be purchased in advance at the rectory of either parish.

Allison Koch, 1285 Scott avenue, is returning today from a house-party in Indiana where she was the guest of Mrs. L. F. Gates.
