

Woman's Club Art Exhibit Heralded by Junior Artists

By W. W.

This week the store windows of Wilmette have contained an art exhibition of more than usual interest, the posters painted by pupils in the seventh and eighth grades to announce the Annual Art exhibit of the Woman's club of Wilmette on April 29 and 30, and May 1. It seems to be the general opinion throughout the village that these posters would have been decidedly creditable to artists of greater maturity, and that there is every reason for honest pride in the general excellence of the work that has been done.

When the Woman's club announced a series of three prizes for the best posters announcing the Art exhibit, it did not expect such a liberal response in the form of high-class work. As matters turned out, however, the members of the art committee of the club found themselves confronted with a real problem in selecting the best, when there were so many good offerings to choose from. After long and careful consideration, the following awards were announced:

Virginia Polonis, first prize; Grenfeld Older, second prize; Jane Davis, third prize; honorable mention, Mildred Anderson, Jenet Fisher, Kathryn Grouning, David Henderson, Davis Lott, Jack Mee, Lucy Murdison, David Norren, Louise Shepherd, Jerry Wilson, and Leonard Wolf.

The work of these young artists, and representative samples of the work of other contestants will be shown at the Art exhibit.

Meanwhile, there is every indication that there will be many other interesting and attractive features of the display that is opening at the Woman's club this evening. The works of many Wilmette artists are eagerly sought and broadly appreciated, and these works will be on view. Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Davis have signified their intention to exhibit, in addition to the artists enumerated in a recent issue of WILMETTE LIFE. The Woman's club has been fortunate in attracting the interest of many of the younger group of artists and art students, whose work gives promise that they will shortly be found among the group who have "arrived." One unique feature will be a display of a series of miniature stage settings, designed by students of the New Trier High school, and a novelty of outstanding interest will be the original cartoons, that will be shown by Carey Orr, of the Chicago Tribune. The exhibition will be open to the public all day Saturday afternoon and evening.
