

PLAY WELL HANDLED

"Icebound," Play Written by Owen Davis, Delights Audience as Presented by New Trier Dramatic Club

The performance of Owen Davis' prize play, "Icebound," given Saturday night at New Trier by the Players of the Dramatic Club, was unusually well done. Those of the audience familiar with the necessary qualifications of membership in the Players came expecting a better than average performance, and left with their expectations fulfilled.

The story of "Icebound" is that of a narrow minded, gossiping community and a woman of an heroic spirit whom its meanness and sordidness could not spoil. A fine interpretation of this character was given by Virginia Bradford. She played the part with all the quiet intensity and subtle pathos that it required.

One of the most striking bits of acting was done by Stephen Harwood, who took the part of Ben, the black sheep of the Jordan family. His every gesture contributed to his characterization, and the curtain of the last act found more than one pair of eyes in the audience a bit misty.

Ralph Arnold, as usual, acquitted himself well as Judge Bradford, the family lawyer of the Jordans. Ralph is new at New Trier this year, but he has already taken part in three Dramatic Club productions. His deep voice and dignified presence are well suited to parts requiring a more mature manner.

The parts of the rest of the Jordan family, their characters as pinched and narrow as their lives were dull and uneventful, were uniformly well acted. John Iliiff brought out the petty selfish nature of Henry Jordan in a very convincing manner, while his stepdaughter with all her cheap coquetry was given a realistic interpretation by Margaret Whitsett.

A bit of comedy was introduced by George Hunsche, a freshman, as Orin Fellows, the young son of one of the Jordan family. The part of his mother was well acted by Jane Burrill.

New Trier Students Receive Awards for Athletic Activity

Members of the New Trier High school swimming and basketball teams were awarded their letters in recognition of the splendid athletic achievement of the past year, during the assembly period on Friday, April 22, by Edward J. Phelps, chairman of the committee on student activities of the school board.

The first half of the assembly was taken up by an enjoyable program presented by the Boys' Glee Club under the direction of Mrs. Marian Cotton. The numbers given by the Glee Club were "Song of the Volga Boatman," "Rolling Down to Rio," "Send Out Thy Light," and "Bells of St. Mary's." This Glee Club was picked to sing at a large convention last Saturday in Chicago.

Lightweight basketball letters were received by Captain Mills, Smith, MacLean, Whitaker, Anderson, Strong, Richards, and Lundberg.

Senior swimming letters were presented to Captain Pope, MacNeille, Holloway, Ryerson, Carpenter, and Manager Cochran.

Junior swimming numerals were given to D. Granstrom, Huntley, and Sprenger.

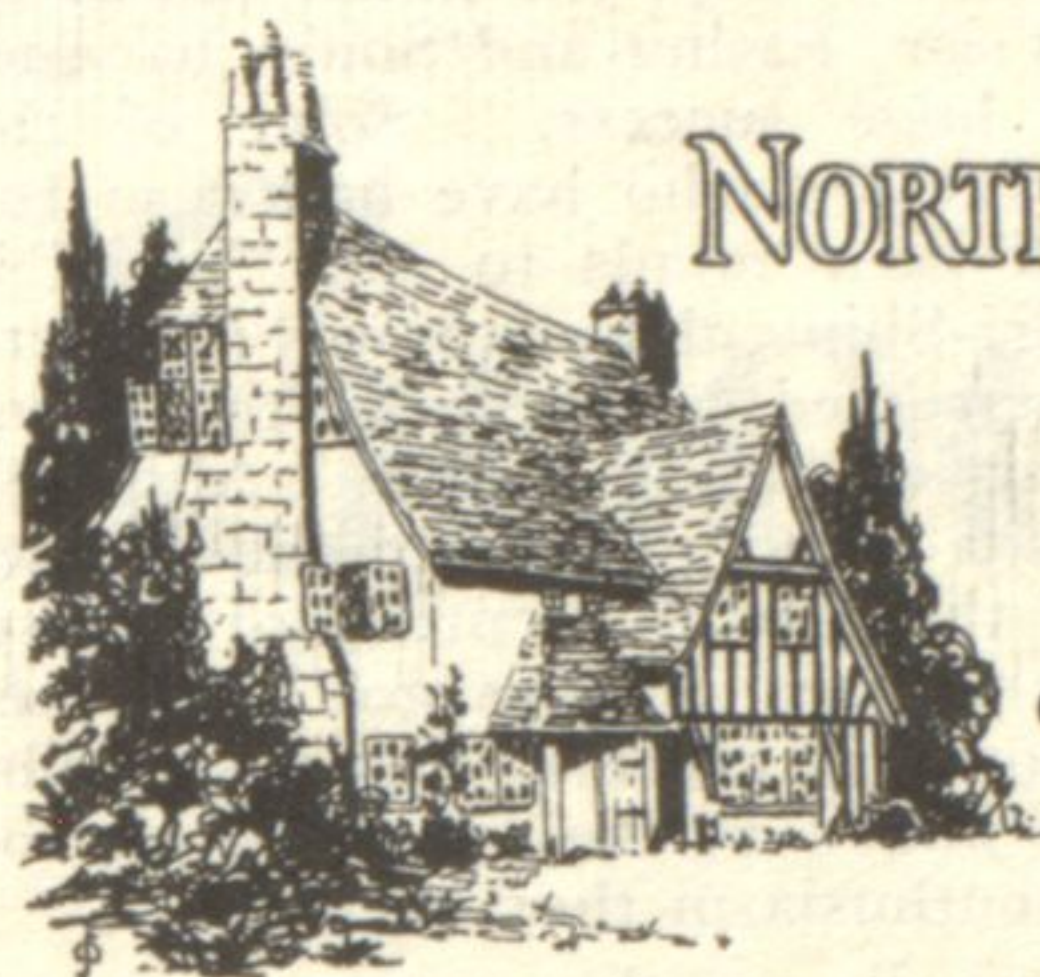

Cheer leading letters were presented to Moore, Iliiff, Ellis, and G. Cogswell. Mr. Phelps then closed the assembly with a short address.
