

Lord's

BOOK SHOP

FOUNTAIN SQUARE
EVANSTON

Telephones

University 1024

Wilmette 3700

Rogers Park 1122

Runaway Days

Samuel Scoville, Jr.

Harcourt, Brace & Co. .... $2.50

Mysteries

Knut Hamsun

Alfred A. Knopf ..... $2.50

The Way of Romance

Vivian Gilbert

Appleton ..... $2.00

The Magic Mountain

Thomas Mann

(2 Volumes)

Alfred A. Knopf ..... $6.00

Young Men in Love

Michael Arlen

Doran ..... $2.50

Pharisees and Publicans

E. F. Benson

Doran ..... $2.00

Oil! (A Novel)

Upton Sinclair

Albert & Charles Boni .... $2.50

The Main Stream

Stuart Sherman

Charles Scribner's Sons .... $2.50

Re-Forging America

Lothrop Stoddard

Charles Scribner's Sons .... $3.00

Rogues and Vagabonds

Compton Mackenzie

Doran ..... $2.00

Sack and Sugar

Mrs. Alfred Sidgwick

Doubleday, Page & Co. .... $2.00

An American Saga

Carl Christian Jensen

Little, Brown & Co. .... $2.50

Billet Francaise

$1.25

Delicately tinted note paper—with envelope and paper for message, in one piece. In compose orchid, blue, gray, and green—or pure white.

Lord's—First Floor

Just inside the West Davis Street Door

NEWEST BOOKS AND BOOK REVIEWS

DID YOU KNOW—

That a new form of a question and answer book will be issued May 15 by Boni Liveright of which Samuel Adams is the author?

That John Buchan, novelist, has been nominated for Parliament to represent the Scottish University?

That The Famous Players which abandoned the idea of filming "Sorrell and Son" have sold the film rights to Herbert Brenon?

That Edwin Balmer, an Evanston author, has been made editor of the Red Book recently?

We think that the next new and popular game will consist of trying to pick out the famous movie people and contemporary folk in Don Ryan's fine novel, "Angel's Flight," which Boni and Liveright are publishing in August. Don Ryan, during the thirty-seven years of his life, has been, among other things, newspaper man, professional dancer, vaudeville actor, first lieutenant of infantry, and title writer for the movies. This is a clue to unscrambling many of the important personages thinly disguised in this novel.

Since it has been found necessary to publish "The Mad Professor" by Hermann Sudermann in two volumes, its publication will not take place until the fall.

New and Interesting Books for Your Library

Fiction

- The Madonna of the Sleeping Car.
Maurice De Kobra ..... $2.50
- The Immortal Marriage.
Gertrude Atherton ..... $2.50
- The Sombre Flame
Samuel Rogers ..... $2.50
- Chains
Theodore Dreiser ..... $2.50
- The Lonely Ship
Storm Jameson ..... $2.50
- The Sorrows of Elsie
Andre Savignon ..... $2.00
- Young Men in Love
Michael Arlen ..... $2.50

Miscellaneous

- The Rise of American Civilization (2 Vols.)
Charles A. Beard
Mary R. Beard ..... $12.50
- Runaway Days
Samuel Scoville, Jr. .... $2.50
- George Eliot and Her Times
Elizabeth S. Haldane .... $3.50
- Polonaise (Life of Chopin)
Guy De Pourtales ..... $3.00
- First Crossing of the Polar Sea
Ronald Amundsen and Lincoln Ellsworth ..... $5.00
- Practical Furniture Decorations (2 vol.)
Shapland, each ..... $5.00

Subscriptions Taken for All
Magazines

Chandler's

630 DAVIS STREET
University 123

Reviews of New Books

"MR. FORTUNE'S MAGGOT" — By Sylvia Townsend Warner.

If Sylvia Townsend Warner gained a prominent position for herself in the literary world with "Lolly Willoves" she has materially strengthened it—"dug in," so to speak—with "Mr. Fortune's Maggot." Her sense of the ridiculous notable in her first book is given rollicking free play here, until Mr. Fortune becomes one of those characters who is a constant source of joy in times of trouble.

Of course Mr. Fortune really did more than his share. But he never became cross about it, that is one of his endearing traits. Mr. Fortune's "maggot," in other words "perverse fancy," was to turn from the well populated center of St. Fabien toward that unspoiled tropically luxuriant paradise of Fanua, a little volcanic island in the Pacific. Thither against all the best advice of his superiors in the church he journeyed, here he found peace for his soul. He makes almost immediately a convert, a beautiful agile youth who comes to him of his own free will and lives with him. Mr. Fortune feels that this soul of Lueli is a gift from God and tries therefore, to call him "Theodore." The boy has no objection and they live together in joyful comradeship until the day it turns out that Lueli is worshipping his own god in private not far away. Mr. Fortune is terribly hurt and tries to destroy Lueli's god, but in the end restores it to him and destroys instead his own. Then he realizes that because he is destroying the very peace that he loves he must go away.

These two characters are masterful and delicate creations, and the book is a beautiful artistic whole.

—ESTHER GOULD.

Critics unite in praising:

The ROAD to the TEMPLE

Susan Glaspell's kindling biography of George Cram Cook.

Harry Hansen says, "It has been a long, long time since any book has stirred me so profoundly."

Frederick A. Stokes Co. $3.00

3rd Large Printing

THE OLD COUNTESS

Anne Douglas Sedgwick

"Surpasses 'The Little French Girl.'"—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

"Swift and beautiful. Surely one of the best novels of the Spring."—Esther Forbes in the Book Review.

Houghton Mifflin Co.

$2.50 at all bookstores

Just Paragraphs

Hugh Walpole in reviewing Olive Schreiner's posthumous novel, "From Man to Man" finds that in three quarters of the volume there is nothing of value for the modern reader, yet in that other quarter there is something which ranks with true creation and marks the author as one "in the line of true artists, at the very times when she was herself least aware of it."

Ezra Pound, American poet, has issued the following invitation, "I should be pleased to accept two million dollars for the foundation of a bearable and intelligent civilization, in some salubrious climate, preferably somewhere in Europe, with a nucleus of American inhabitants, selected from those who are untainted by the last three Presidential reigns." It is rumored that Mr. Pound is coming on a lecture tour to the United States whether in the hope of meeting this benevolent capitalist or of making the two million himself we cannot say.

Mrs. Atherton's new novel, "The Immortal Marriage," reconstructs the Periclesian Age, and the love story of the two (according to her) perfect lovers.

Russell Crouse of the New York Evening Post listed twelve novels as the worst that have ever been written meaning that the style is so absurd and the technique so peculiar that they are literary curiosities of the period.

The author of "Slippy Magee," Marie Conway Oemler, has written a novel, published recently, which deals with the life of John Wesley. The portrait is a frank one but reverently handled and true to modern biographers gives proof that he was a human being.

"EARS TO HEAR"

"In no way do people differ more than in what they do with their ears. A few of us use them to hear with. Most of us, I am afraid, like a certain animal, only wag them. Hardly any of us really 'take in' more than a fraction of the interesting or beautiful experiences that constantly present themselves for admittance at the portals of our ears."

In this way does Daniel Gregory Mason introduce his "Ears to Hear, a guide for music lovers," one of the booklets in the Reading with a Purpose series issued by the American Library association.

He continues "Seeing and hearing are active processes not passive states. Listening is not an occupation for the lazy or dull; it requires a keen and collected intelligence; but in the in-exhaustive delights it brings we are repaid a thousand fold for all the effort we have to make."

National music week was May 1-7, and in celebration of it, musicians, critics and educators compiled a list of books recommended to quicken the average person's musical perceptions.

—Anne Whitmack

"We can't keep out of little hells that other people are making."

SPRING TIDES

By R. E. Pinkerton

Romance! Adventure!
Rugged characterizations!
All those appealing qualities for a novel which the author displayed so well in "The Test of Donald Norton." Net $2.00.

Chicago-Reilly & Lee-New York