INADEQUATE LIBRARY SPACE HITS PUPILS

tion from ten percent to twelve percent of the books pass out to the children through the school librarian and the various teachers. This circulation is exclusive, of course, of the number of books actually drawn by individual children on their own cards.

From these facts parents will see the very vital part that the library is playing in the educational and study needs of their children and naturally do not want the library to be handicapped in this important service.

Bond Ballot June 11

By voting bonds which provide for a new addition to the library, the children's work will be better organized and the books will be stored and displayed in a much better way than is possible at the present time. The reference room space will be enlarged so that the children will be better enabled to work right at the library and will not be forced to withdraw heavy and expensive volumes and take them to their homes. Surely all of these facts should make every thinking parent desire to help in securing the success of the bond election. Don't forget to vote favorably on this important question.
