

Fine Arts Academy to Open in Carlson Tower on July 6

In studios designed by the Park Ridge sculptor, Ianelli, with the work personally executed by the German artist, Herringer, the Evanston Academy of Fine Arts will open for its summer session and initial work Wednesday, July 6.

Carl Scheffler, the director, for many years with the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts, has located this late addition to Evanston educational agencies in the spacious tower on the 8th and 9th floors of the Carlson building, Orrington avenue and Church street.

A school of fine and applied arts is Mr. Scheffler's ambition, to employ modern educational methods and present a course of art training to give a solid foundation for a life's work in any chosen branch of artistic endeavor. He plans a two year course. He is completing his faculty, choosing it from artists and teachers of superior ability.

The summer term will be continued for eight weeks, and the full year course will begin September 6 and be continued for nine months. The summer course will include classes in artistic expression, advanced painting, advanced and advertising illustration, interior decoration, dress and costume design and the various handicrafts. An evening school and Saturday morning classes for children will also be arranged by the director.

NORTHWESTERN LINKS CHAMPIONSHIP COURSE

Forest Preserve Officials Look Forward to Public Links Tournament

A total of 506 players who visited the Northwestern public golf links last Sunday attest in stronger terms than any words the oft-repeated claim that Northwestern is the best of any of the entire Forest Preserve courses.

This eighteen hole course through which the north branch of the Chicago river winds its way is replete with hazards, including five water holes, with greens and fairways which make of the whole a veritable paradise for the enthusiastic golfer.

It is here the public links championship games are to be played in 1928, before which time, an addition of nine holes are to be added to the course.

John Reuter, Jr., who is serving Northwestern as professional this season, is enthusiastic over the course. In his thirty years' experience at the game he has played on many links, and is frank to say that in Northwestern he finds the nearest his ideal of any he has ever visited. Northwestern is completely surrounded by heavy natural forest, affording one of the most restful of spots which the mind can conceive, at the same time offering all that is required to meet the demand of the most experienced at golf, in the way of fairways, greens and hazards.

Started as Caddy

Pro Reuter began his career at golf as a caddy, out at Midlothian. Later he was connected with Crawford-McGregor at Dayton, Ohio, manufacturers of golf clubs; then as Pro at the Dayton Country club for two years; at Richmond, Ind., for two years; and Dixon, N. D., for ten years. He has the distinction of having won the state championship of North Dakota six times.

Last year he attended the British open, stopping at St. Andrews, also playing in France, Brussels and elsewhere on this trip abroad.

Mr. Reuter has invented an aluminum putter which he says is taking very favorably with the R. and A.

Cleo C. Campbell, of Glencoe, formerly manager of the Glencoe office of Gilbert D. Johnson and Bro., is cashier at Northwestern Links this season.

A new Pro shop has just been completed and the club house is in fine condition.

During the school vacation, Orville Reuter, a son of Pro Reuter is assisting his father at the shop. Mr. Reuter is not only a past master at the game, but as an instructor his time is much in demand by the ever increasing beginners and old time players who are seeking to improve their game at Northwestern this season.

Northwestern is very accessible to any of the north shore villages, as well as Evanston. It is only a short distance south of the Glenview road, on Harms road.

The fees for playing are $1.00 for Saturdays, Sundays and holidays and 50 cents on other week days.

ENTERTAINS OFFICE FORCE

Eighty members of his office force were guests of Francis Peabody Butler Saturday at a luncheon. The guests participated in sports of all kinds, and enjoyed themselves playing ball and rowing. The luncheon is an annual affair, and this year moving pictures of the guests, which were taken last year, were shown.

Mrs. W. S. Bell, of 610 Cherry street, has as her guest this week end Miss Ruth Thompson, her niece, whose home is in Milwaukee.
