

300 DOGS IMMUNIZED

Masters of Local Canines Cooperate With Village Authorities to Prevent Spread of Epidemic of Rabies

Time was when fleas were the only things that pestered Winnetka canines, but times have changed.

Today, in dogland, rules of adornment require that any dog appearing on the street must be regaled in a collar from which is suspended at least two metal pendants. So far, ear-rings are taboo.

Since the recent decree of those responsible for this latest custom affecting dog adornment, more than three hundred of the second little brass pendants for collar attachment have been issued.

These are certificates from the village authorities, that the dog, for which the tag is issued has been immunized by the anti-rabic treatment. This immunization tag, similar in size to the dog license tag, in like manner as the latter, must be worn on the dog's collar.

If this custom proves objectionable to any canine, his only other alternative is to remain at home or to don the now out-of-date muzzle.

All this has been prompted by the recent rabies scare in the village. Dr. H. A. Orvis, health officer, who promptly co-operated with the police department in preventing what threatened an epidemic of rabies among Winnetka dogs, says no new cases have developed the past week.

It is said to be not improbable that future action may be taken by the village, whereby owners of dogs, before being able to procure the annual dog license for their dog, will be required to present a certificate of immunization by the anti-rabic treatment, for the dog for which the license is sought.

Dr. Orvis says he wishes to thank the people of Winnetka, who own dogs, for the splendid co-operation they have shown in meeting the request of the authorities in obtaining the immunization treatment against rabies for their dogs.

"This eliminates these dogs as sources of danger to other dogs, and more particularly to children," he said. "Those who have not had their dogs immunized are urgently advised to do so at once, and those who have had the work done should not fail to register the certificate with the police department and get the tag.

"We want to give everyone who will co-operate in this community movement proper credit and not place him on the delinquent list.

"If we can have a response in the next few days equal to that of the past week, we will have a short list to follow up. The community spirit is fine, and I am sure we soon will have so large a percentage of dogs immunized that we can feel that our families are safe against the threatened rabies epidemic, for some time to come."

The cost of the immunization treatment, Dr. Orvis says is very small, veterinarians having made a rate of only $2.50. This rate, he says is even reduced to $1.50 a treatment, if a number of dogs are taken to the veterinarian, at the same time.

Attorney in Springfield in Support of Park Area

Frederick Dickinson, village attorney, is in Springfield this week for the purpose of urging the passage of legislation making possible the acquisition of park area in the Skokie on ten or twenty year installment payments. He is also opposing the amendment of the commerce commission, an action which would place municipally owned utilities under the jurisdiction of the commission.

Local Groups to Sponsor Picnics for Chicagoans

The decision of the Winnetka Circles to discontinue the picnics for the children of Chicago Commons and Onward Neighborhood House is said to be a keen disappointment to many who have been closest to this work for many years.

One who has helped with these picnics comments concerning how much this glimpse of a life so different from that to which they are accustomed means to these little children.

In bringing them to Winnetka, they are given more than just lunch and a dip in the lake; it is a vision of another world, of people whose lives are so much richer and fuller than they have any conception of, that it is an inspiration and encouragement.

But some who have been carrying on this work for years felt they could not forego this pleasure and are planning as usual to give their annual picnic.

A group of mothers from Onward Neighborhood House came out last week and spent a delightful day at the home of Mrs. Ayres Boal. On July 8 the Walden Road Circle will have another group from Onward.

The West Elm Street circle, Mrs. Burton H. Atwood, Jr., chairman, will entertain a group from Chicago Commons on July 6. The Community House staff will have another group from the Commons on June 28, and Mrs. A. J. Balaban will be hostess to two picnics, one in July and another in August.

Board Expresses Appreciation of Aid for Library

That the Winnetka Public library has been a success, and none would question the fact that it has been a good investment to the tax-payer, was shown at the polls on June 11, when the people of Winnetka voted for a bond issue of $75,000 to meet the plan of the trustees for an enlargement of the Library building.

The response of the community at this election is greatly appreciated not only by the Board of Trustees and by the librarian but by all the patrons of the library who have had to select their reading material from some 18,000 volumes which are crowded into a shelving capacity of only 9,000 volumes. It is suspected that even the books themselves are, like the guard in "Hamlet," saying: "For this relief much thanks."

The Winnetka Library springs from a root deeply implanted in the spirit of Winnetka—the same root from which have sprung our schools and churches and Community House. Even if no tangible relationship were traceable, the common spirit and purpose would be manifest. The library stands secure in an established place in the confidence of the library world, and with its new enlargement and capacity for a greater assortment of books, it is hoped that the library will always occupy a large place in the hearts of the citizens of Winnetka.
