

52 Colleges Plan Realty Courses in Next School Year

When the first national conference to outline an educational preparation for the vocation of real estate was called, at Madison, Wis., in April of 1923, courses in real estate or in land economics were unknown in all but three or four institutions of learning in the United States. In September of this year fifty-two universities and colleges will be offering one or more of these courses, according to a tabulation which has just been issued by the National Association of Real Estate boards. The tabulation was made by the association's department of education and research through direct correspondence with deans of the departments of commerce and corresponding administrative officials of the colleges and universities.

Paralleling the introduction of land economics and real estate into the curricula of colleges and universities, courses in these subjects have come to take a prominent place also in the adult education movement, according to a further tabulation made by the association from special reports by its member boards.

Since last September 89 local real estate boards in cities throughout the United States conducted courses in real estate either under their own auspices or in co-operation with Y. M. C. A. schools, university extension divisions, or similar institutions: 117 courses were given, seventy-six of them being general courses in real estate business fundamentals. Eleven of them were special courses in real estate appraisal methods; eight were courses in real estate law; six were courses in the technique of real estate conveying; six were courses in specialized real estate selling methods; three were

Richard T. Ely Offers Housing Course at N. U.

How to live in comfort, with healthful air and environment, even if one resides in the more congested sections of Chicago will be the basis of a special course in Housing to be given at Northwestern university during the coming college period by Dr. Richard T. Ely. As director of the Institute for Research in Land Economics and Public Utilities, Director Ely has taken a leading part in studying the American housing situation and is one of the sponsors for the famous "Sunnyside" metropolitan community in New York. Some of the features of the new course will be based upon investigations now being made in Europe by Coleman Woodbury, a Northwestern alumnus, who recently won a Rhodes scholarship.

Miss Lois Scharf Opens Kindergarten Sessions

Miss Lois Scharf of 509 Cherry street, who is a graduate of the National Kindergarten and Elementary college, opened a kindergarten on July 1. The school is in session every morning except Saturday from 9 to 11:30 o'clock and will continue for six weeks. Miss Scharf can accommodate thirty pupils for the entire time or will make arrangements for daily pupils, she explains. Information in regard to the kindergarten may be obtained by calling Winnetka 181.
