

Evanston Has Lists of 200 Best Books by American Writers

There are now available copies of the prize list of 200 "best books" by American authors, compiled for the General Federation of Women's clubs' contest recently conducted through Scribner's magazine

The list was edited by Harriet C. Long of the Wisconsin Library commission who has for a number of years selected the volumes that are issued through the extension plan of the library. The object of the contest was to encourage interest in the creative work of American writers, and the books were restricted to those written, translated or compiled by Americans.

The list includes the date of publication, the publisher and the price of the volumes selected. It includes biography, history, travels around the world, novels, new and old, books "from our romantic past," "of books and authors," "essays with charm," poetry, theater and drama, art music, science, "the world about us," philosophy, religion, books of special interest and children's books.

The cost of the list is trifling, and it is being circulated to an interested patronage.

Dr. Norman Richardson to Speak at Assembly

Dr. Norman A. Richardson, professor of religious education, Northwestern university, will be the speaker at the July 21 assembly of the National Kindergarten and Elementary college, and will give the results of a very interesting study of the problem experiences of adolescent girls which he has carried on with the assistance of a group of his students. Although the students in the college are primarily interested in the problems relating to childhood, they frequently come in direct contact with those of the older child, and practical material on this subject is very valuable to them.
