3 of "The Barker"
Company at the Last
Play Class Session

Three people of the stage, Mrs. Carlos Andrews and daughter, Miss Charlotte, and Owen Davis, all of the company of "The Barker," now playing at the Blackstone theater, Chicago, lent their presence to last Tuesday's successful closing day of the term of the Town and Gown play-writing class at Evanston in which many north shore people have a part.

Mr. Davis, son of the well-known playwright, is playing the role of the young man in "The Barker," which stars Richard Bennett. Miss Andrews is an understudy for all women of the cast, and Mrs. Andrews, who from her daughter's first connection with the play, has accompanied her to the stage, has recently been given a part in the crowd of spectators appearing in the opening and closing scenes of the play.

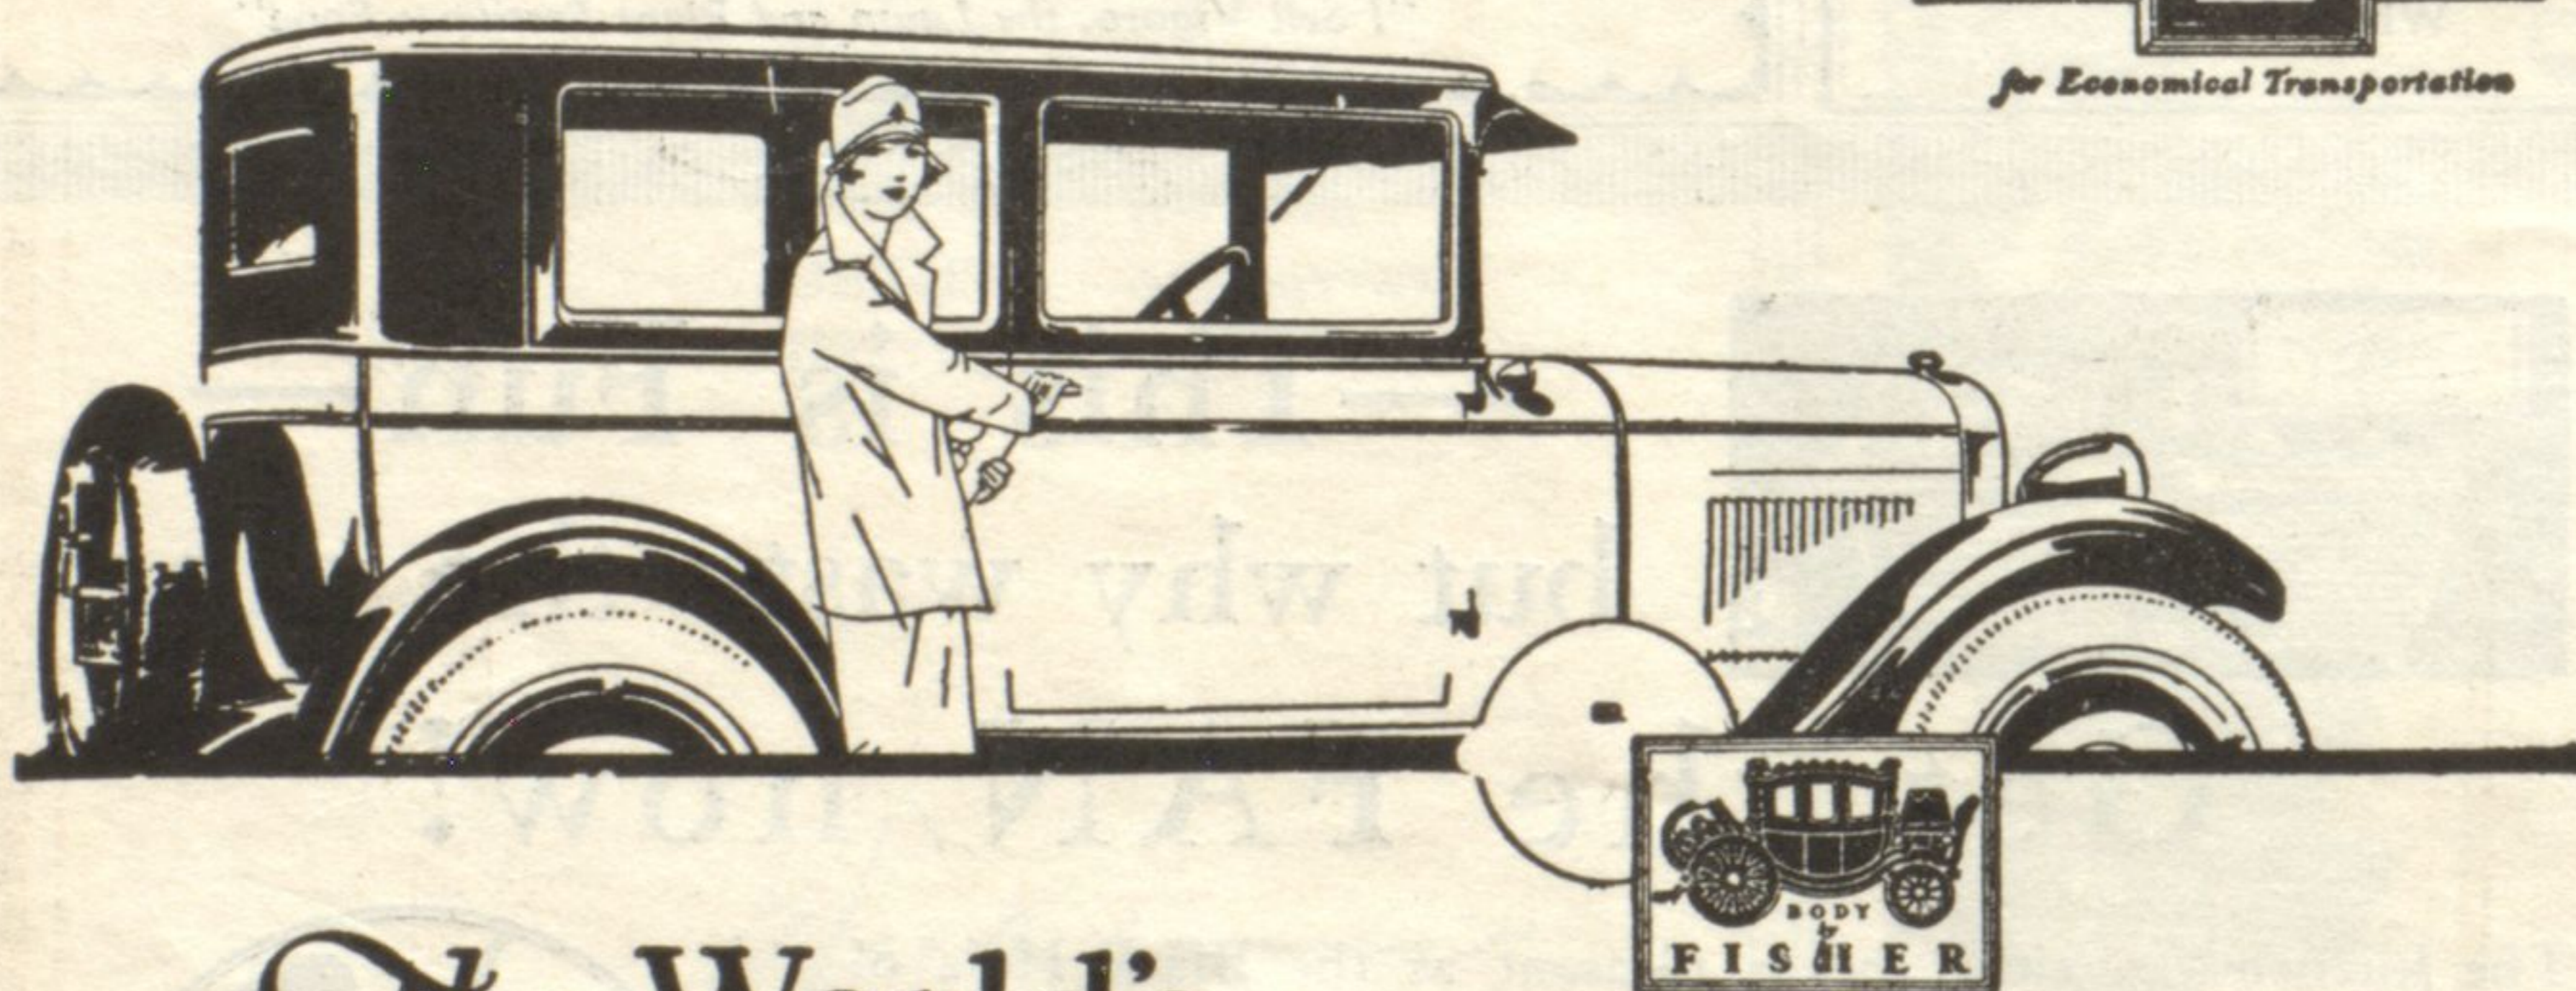

Mr. Davis played the leading role in Alice C. D. Riley's tragedy, "Orbits," which was one of the group of four given presentation Tuesday morning in Mrs. Riley's garden where the closing day festivities were enjoyed. The other play-writing class productions presented were a little play about the Prince of Wales, "It Might Have Happened Son," written by Mary Simpson McManus of Chicago, "Undertow" by Mrs. Max Ehlers, and "The Telegram," by Elizabeth Neyer-cord Cullis of Chicago.

In beginning the program in mid-morning, Theodore Ballou Hinckley, director of the class, discussed "Broadway" and "The Road to Rome."

After a Dutch treat picnic lunch in the garden, the class and guests adjourned to the Evanston Woman's club where a program of plays written in the class was presented, including one participated in by north shore people.

PERFECT ATTENDANCE

A record of perfect attendance and of not being tardy during the past school year was established by Carroll Dean Murphy, it was announced this week. In a recent issue of the WINNETKA TALK a list of 29 pupils who had established a like record were published. Through a stenographic error Miss Murphy's name was omitted. With this addition, there were 30 pupils of the Winnetka schools who held such a record instead of the 29 as previously announced.
