

Gondolas in River Part of Villa Venice's Charm

Gondolas brought direct from Venice ply the Desplaines river amid the glimmer of colored lights at "Villa Venice," a charming entertainment place on Milwaukee avenue at the river.

Among the oaks and willows along the river bank amid beautiful gardens, is located this Italian summer play place, formerly "The House That Jack Built," recently taken over by Albert Bouche, a Frenchman. Interior and exterior decorations have been fashioned after the design of an Italian restaurant. Something of France, Russia and Spain also pervades the place in exotic touches here and there, and the eight acres of landscaped beauty and buildings harbor artistic treasures of all nations. There are sunken gardens with marble fountains and statues, Venetian verandas banked with colorful flowers and verdure, rambling hedges, curving walks, soft lights and arbors. Music echoes over the river.

Within doors there is a gay blend of bright color with fantastic mural decorations, rich tapestries and marbles. The food is said to tempt the palate of the gourmet, and the entertainment is original and delightful.

Leave Clean Camp Behind You, Hint to Tourists

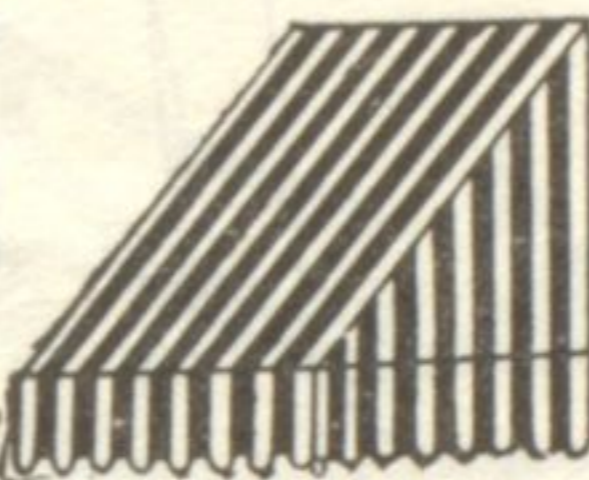

With touring and camping season at its height, Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club, makes a few timely suggestions to motorists.

Be careful of fire. A large percentage of the most costly forest fires can be traced directly to careless campers or smokers. When parking in forests or under trees, avoid spaces where dead branches or pine cones may fall and damage your car. Do not cover the hood of your car with canvas or other material until it has had a chance to cool. Otherwise it will sweat and ruin the finish. Tourists should leave a clean camp ground behind them, thereby reducing the restrictions being placed on camping by owners of private property. Scattered refuse and broken laws are poor monuments for the motorist and sportsman to leave behind them, observes Mr. Hayes.

Mrs. F. W. Duncan and her children, Francis, William, Jr., and Susan, of 1040 Oak street, have been spending two weeks with Mr. Duncan's parents at Mylith Park, near Wauconda, Ill.
