Abel Gives Own
Name to Business
Long Established

When anyone on the north shore hears the name, Exide Battery Service, they immediately associate with it the name of U. C. Abel, for it was Mr. Abel, who in 1919 started the business in a small way and who has gradually developed it into one of the leading industries of the village.

Therefore, the slight change which Mr. Abel is now making in the name of his company will in no wise diminish his identity with this business, but, on the contrary, will more closely associate his name with what has proven his life work.

The new name will be The Abel Battery & Ignition Service, which change will have become firmly established by the time Mr. Abel moves into his new quarters recently purchased at 716 Elm street, directly west of the Winnetka Masonic temple.

Nine years ago when Mr. Abel first started, he was located in a small room on Prouty court at Oak street. A little later his business had grown until he was compelled to seek larger quarters and he came to 554 Lincoln avenue where he has since been located but which his business has again outgrown, and on November 1, when he occupies his still larger and more modern quarters on Elm street, he will have floor space of 8,000 square feet.

The names Abel and Exide are still as closely affiliated as before, but in the new quarters Mr. Abel will be equipped to render even better service than in the past, and, in addition, will also be equipped to take care of light mechanical repair work on automobiles and he will also have a greasing and washing service for cars.

Mr. Abel is authorized distributor for Exide batteries, Delco and Remy ignition, Klaxon horns and North-East electrical equipment, with service for car owners and where dealers may also obtain any of the various units or parts desired.
