

Champion Woman Angler Sets Out for New Records

Consternation has reigned supreme this week among the finny tribe at Tommahawk lake, Wisconsin, where Miss Vinnie Irwin, of Winnetka, who last year established the season's record of landing the largest muskelunge caught there during the year is again angling for still greater honors.

This year it is said she hopes to add a record catch of pickerel and pike and this winter may take a trip into the northern wilds in quest of deer.

Miss Irwin left Friday of last week on the present fishing trip, motoring up with James Exelby and wife of 745 Sheridan road, Winnetka. It is her annual vacation from the duties of secretary to the Abel Battery & Ignition service and as secretary of the Winnetka Building & Loan association, with offices at 554 Lincoln avenue.

Mr. Abel, who is a stickler for detail records and facts, has been constantly at his office since Miss Irwin left, awaiting her promised report of the catch from day to day, but up to Thursday had not received a word. His natural conclusion is that she either is having such marvelous success that she has not had time to make her accustomed daily report, or, that she has not been catching anything.

Public utility power plants in Illinois generated 5,930,399,090 kilowatt-hours of electricity in 1926.
