

Name Subdivision in Glencoe After Dennis, Pioneer

Charles M. Dennis, of 823 Greenleaf avenue, Glencoe, one of the earliest residents of the village and who has the distinction of pioneering also in the local business affairs of the village in that he conducted the first grocery store in Glencoe, is to be further honored by having the latest subdivision there named for him.

The Dennis subdivision is located on a new street, which also is to be known as Dennis lane. It is one block in length, extending from Greenbay road to Greenleaf avenue between Beach road and Lincoln drive.

Here are located sixteen beautifully wooded lots, highly restricted as to their development and to be handled exclusively by the Glencoe office of McGuire & Orr, 316 Park avenue.

The development will also mark the passing of two old and picturesque landmarks, the old Dennis residence and the old Fanning homestead, which are to be razed to make room for the new modern homes which are soon to rise on these valuable sites.

It is interesting to note that the old Fanning residence was erected by the first president of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad and he lived there many years. It is a frame building.

The other is a brick residence and was the old Dennis property.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Vissering returned to their home at 257 Kenilworth avenue last week, after a two weeks' absence from Kenilworth. They have been visiting their son, Norman Vissering, on his grove in Florida, near Babson Park.

Indian Hill Tennis

Following is the summary of the tennis exhibition held on the Indian Hill courts, Sunday afternoon, August 14:

First Match—Singles—2:30 P. M.
Miss Mabel Robinson, Ill. State Junior Girls singles champion, defeated Miss Barbara Holden, Ill. State Junior Girls doubles champion, 6-0, 6-1.

Second Match—Singles—3:30 P. M.
Final match, Men's singles, mid-season tournament — William G. Boyden, Jr. defeated Edmond Fulton, 6-2, 6-0.

Third Match—Mixed Doubles, 4:30 P. M.
Miss Mabel Robinson and Edmond Fulton defeated Miss Barbara Holden and William C. Boyden, Jr., 11-9, 4-6, 6-3.

These matches were played before the largest gallery of the season. The Junior Girl champions appeared at their best during the mixed doubles event. Miss Robinson and Miss Holden are both hard stroking players, the former having the greatest speed and control of her shots to all parts of the court.

September 7 to 14 the Indian Hill club's annual championships will be held in singles, doubles and mixed doubles for family pairs.
