Miss Marie De Golyer
and E. V. Clark to Wed

Miss Marie De Golyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence De Golyer of Chicago, formerly of Evanston, will be married to Everett Vance Clark of Brockton, Mass., September 27 at 8:30.

The wedding will take place in Hubbard Woods at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. De Golyer, 850 Auburn road. Only relatives and close friends will be present as the bride's family has been in mourning.

Mr. Clark and his bride will live near Boston and will be at home after November 1 at 138 Prospect avenue, Brockton. Mr. Clark is a nephew of Mrs. John W. Thomas of Evanston, and the late Mrs. E. M. Bowman of Chicago.

The land that is now the State of Illinois was purchased by General Anthony Wayne, on August 3, 1795, from eleven tribes of Indians for one cent per acre.

A junior dinner dance will be given at Westmoreland Country club Saturday evening. A supper bridge is to be given September 14.

Friends Pay Tribute to the Memory of
Wilbur D. Nesbit

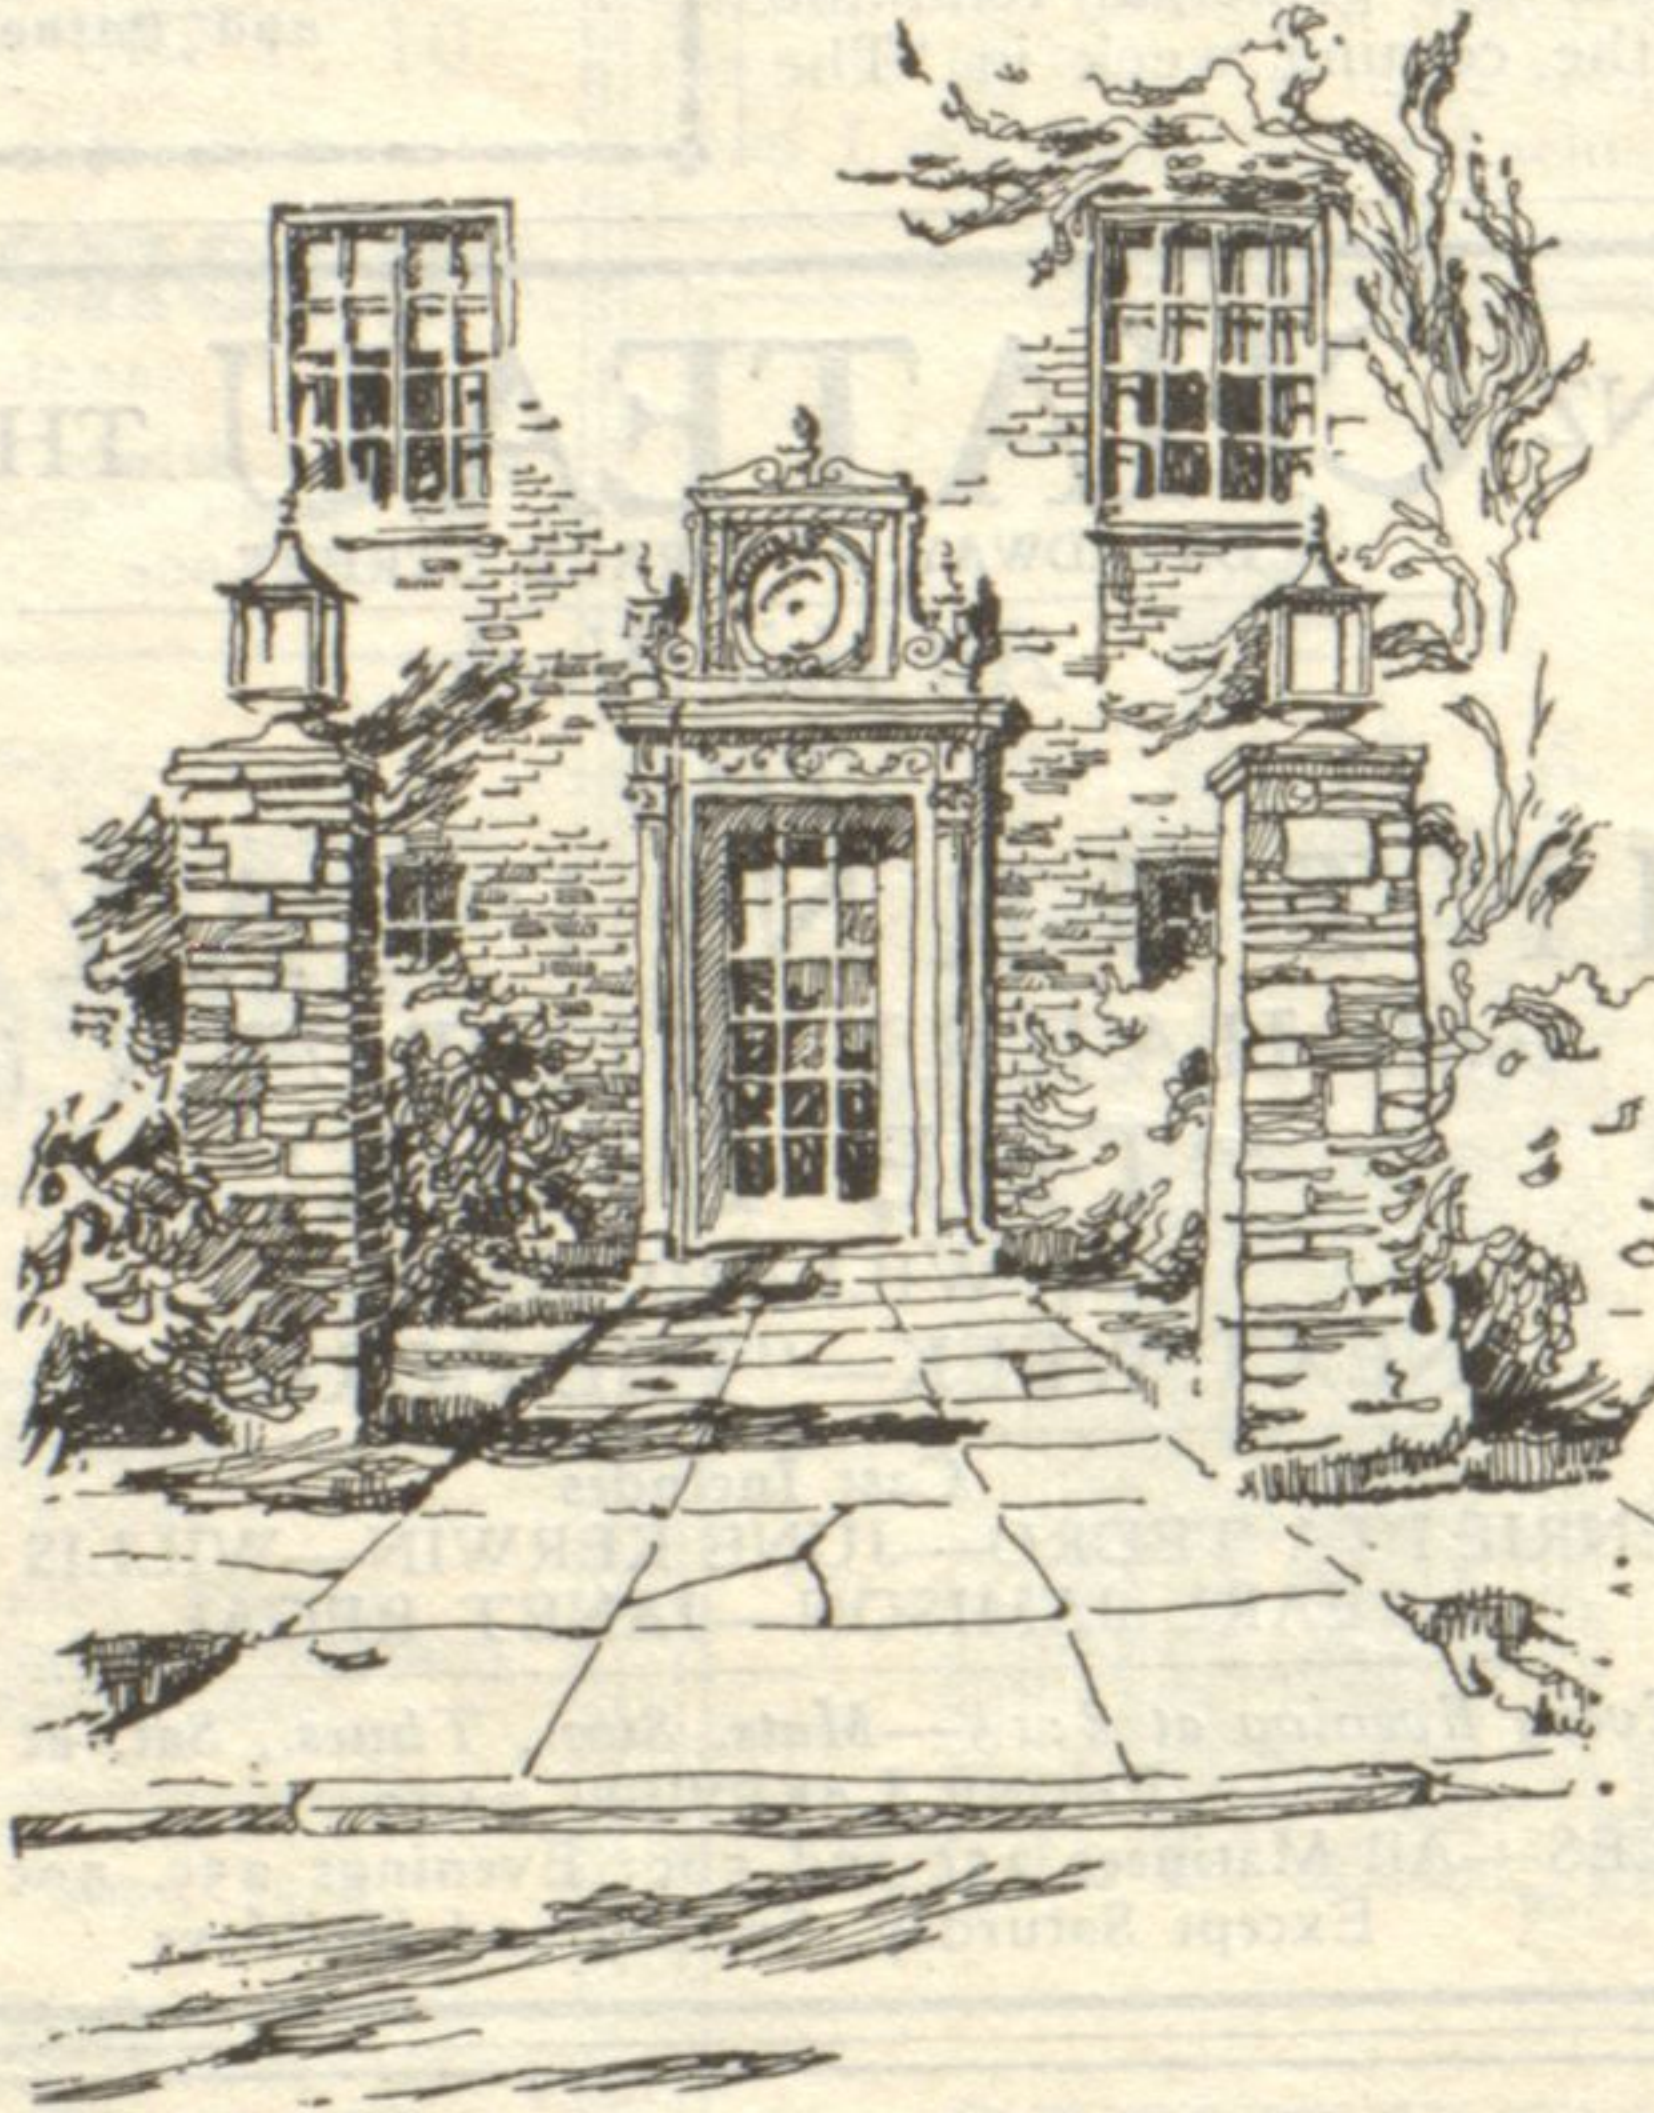

Various tributes have been paid to the memory of Wilbur D. Nesbit, Evanston writer, whose sudden death shocked the world in which he moved, Saturday, August 20.

In recent issue of the Literary Review of the Chicago Evening Post, its editor, Llewellyn Jones, speaks in an editorial tribute to Mr. Nesbit of his loss to thousands of readers of his verse as well as to the business world. "He was," Mr. Jones observes, "that uncommon combination, a popular poet and a successful business man." He was, Mr. Jones states, too, a man who had mastered as no one else "the impponderables which go to make up the ideal toastmaster." He continues: "Not that Mr. Nesbit could teach those impponderables to others (referring to his book on after dinner speeches)—for they came out of his ripe, shrewd, humorous and kindly personality.

Mabel Sterba (Mrs. Antonin Sterba), whose artist husband completed a charming portrait of Mr. Nesbit just a short while previous to his passing, has written the following verses, dated August 23, 1927:

"Wilbur and Mary used to sit with us
And watch the twilight fade upon the lake;
And we would talk of things here and beyond,
As folks are apt to do at eventide—
And Wilbur said, not many days ago,
With that rare smile of his that warmed you by
The overflow of sunshine in his heart:
'I hope my friends will come to see me then,
And now, today!
'Tis hard to bear the loss of such a friend,
To know that he will never come again
With Mary 'round the corner of the house,
Just dropping in at eventide,
To watch the twilight fade upon the lake."
