

While Population Grows North Shore Business Property Retains Its Area

Business houses flourish on the North Shore. There is a vast market to supply.

That market is constantly growing, while the business sections stay within well-defined boundaries.

Do you see what that means to the investor in North Shore business property—in a region that will double its 1920 population before 1940, according to Regional Planning Association figures? North Shore towns are primarily residential. Business is merely an adjunct. Requests for zoning extensions receive careful consideration, and if granted, the extensions are highly conservative.

Quinlan & Tyson recommend North Shore property as a paying investment. Their complete records of the past trend of values, their knowledge of present conditions, and the service of a close-coupled organization specializing on the North Shore, will help you develop an investment that should pay a good profit.

Let us give you further facts and figures on North Shore Business Property. They speak for themselves. Call phone or write.

Special Offering

In the heart of one of the most active commercial sections is this 50 x 150 business lot, attractive either for improving or holding for the future. An old improvement will help carry it.
