Country Day School Board Names Three to Directors' Board

The first meeting of the year of the Parents' association of the North Shore Country Day school was held last Monday evening. Lawrence Howe, the new president of the association, presided. At the meeting of the corporation preceding this session three new members were elected to the board of directors of the school. The new directors are: William B. Hale, Eugene M. Stevens, and Harry L. Wells. They are to serve for a term of three years and take the places of the three retiring members: H. Spaulding Coffin, Calvin Fentress, and Frederick H. Scott.

The address of the evening was given by Headmaster Perry Dunlap Smith, who gave a general survey of the International Conference on New Education held at Locarno last summer. Mr. Smith had been sent by the parents of the school to act as their representative at the conference and he reported that the other delegates at the conference were very much impressed with the fact that a Parents' association had sent their Headmaster. Mr. Smith's principal address at the conference was on the subject of Parents' Associations. This address aroused so much interest that he was asked to repeat it at a later session of the conference. His third address was on the subject of co-education.

The three most vital problems up for discussion at the Locarno conference were co-operation between the school and the parents, co-education, and the use of mental hygiene and psychiatry in school. The general keynote for the conference was given by Mrs. Beatrice Endsor, of England, presiding at the first meeting, when she gave a definition of the true meaning of freedom of education.

the stations, I was certain to be hustled aboard at the first stroke of the warning bell, and to be reminded in pantomime that I would be helpless if I were left behind, for I would find no one in the villages who understood English. I can't imagine more courteous, friendly, or good natured traveling companions.

"To comment intelligently on the poverty and misery noticeable in Moscow streets and Siberian villages, and to draw inferences therefrom as to the failure or success of the present government in Russia, is impossible, unless one had visited the country during the Romanoff regime and could compare present conditions with those of twenty years ago. Certainly I did not see the prosperity or general employment which certain articles published in various newspapers and periodicals had led me to expect."
