It is glad again to give this service, believing that as in former years, it will meet a real need.

In order to carry this out effectively, different village groups, planning large gatherings, may call up the office of Community House, and inquire as to the bookings on that date. In this way, opportunity is given to change the date if the organization feels there would be a conflict. This often means larger audiences for both groups, as well as increased monetary receipts in some instances. It also means a wider appreciation of efforts involved.

Community House will be glad to furnish any information on its books relative to this, and will publish in Winnetka Talk each week the events for the week, so far as they are recorded in its office. Groups are invited to use this service and to co-operate by booking events.

"LILAC TIME" PLAY IN VILLAGE MONDAY

Winnetka Legion Post Sponsors Production of Famed War Drama Nov. 14, 15 and 16

by Critic

Next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday will witness the presentation of "Lilac Time" by Winnetka Post of the American Legion. Never has keener interest been aroused in Winnetka in a theatrical production, it is stated.

In addition to the play itself the audience will be, in effect, publicly opening the new theater in the North Shore Country Day school, which is considered by many the most attractive auditorium in Winnetka. The stage is commodious and beautifully equipped, giving scope and freedom to both actors and stage managers. The audience will find every seat a good one, but those who desire front seats are advised to come early, as the house is nearly sold out. The curtain will rise promptly at 8:15. It is suggested that those coming by automobile enter at the east driveway.

We have previously spoken of the war elements in the play with its tragedy and comedy, but those who saw Jane Cowl in this play some years ago will particularly recall the exquisitely beautiful love scenes that stirred Miss Cowl's audiences so deeply, making them live again all the wonder of youth, springtime, the ecstacy of love's fulfillment and the bitterness of parting. It would be presumptuous to compare Thelma Sidley and William Boyden with Miss Cowl and her leading man, but visitors at rehearsal have reported their amazement at the fervor and sincerity which these young amateurs are bringing to the love story.

Revives Old War Song

There is nothing comparable to music in re-creating scenes of the past. Throughout the play runs the old war song, "Pack up Your Troubles." It is used for both comic and tragic effect. Humorously, when the British officers attempt to teach the song to Jeannine, the French peasant girl, her difficulty Mergentheim, Dorice Elmer, Patty in understanding the English slang which permeates the song affording many laughs. As a tragic background to the grief of parting, we have the song sung in the distance by marching soldiers. It will be a pleasure to hear the splendid voice of Laurence Norem, who leads in the presentation of the song.

Probably the greatest laughter will Hubbard Woods school - James be provoked by two English "Tom-Baumgartl, Kellog Hooker, Buddy Ad- mies," played by Geo. Barbery and ler, John Norris, Ralph Renwick, Judy Glen A. Lloyd. Their interviews with Crowder. Jeanne Dorothy Jacobs, the crusty major in which they ask Betty Burlingham, Virginia Coolidge, for leave and give very ambiguous Fidelia Richards, Nancy Wolcott, Sally reasons, should be a "riot." Genuinely Realistic

Spaulding Coffin, it is believed, will do the best work of his acting career -his portrayal of an aristocratic, stern, but kindly English major. The splendid types that have always made up the English Army require portrayal by men of poise and distinction. Mr. Coffin is such a man and finds the part most congenial. Nothing in the Judge William Gemmill, father of play is more gripping than an episode Mrs. Blythe Grassett, 797 Walden when "Captain Paget," played by Ralph road, was the speaker on the program | Varney, speaks of the death of his of the Kaskaskia chapter, D. A. R., younger brother in battle. Mr. Varney Monday, November 7, at the Hotel makes this moment so real that one loses all sense of his acing.
