

An Every Day House Dress Your Most Costly Evening Gown

Both are cleansed in the same manner, separately—by the "gentle cylinder principle."

Of course, the house dress is laundered, and the gown "cleaned." But the same method restores cleanliness to both—"the gentle cylinder principle," adopted by every modern laundry and dry cleaning establishment as the best way of cleansing clothes without damage.

Some of the foremost manufacturers of home washing machines will tell you that their machine operates on "the gentle cylinder principle." They can only give the same gentle method of washing that we do.

The work that any home washing machine can do is only equivalent to our Wet Wash Service, which costs but five cents a pound. You couldn't begin to do the laundry at home for such a figure, could you? Besides, you have the disagreeable bother of washday.
