

Lord's

BOOK SHOP

FOUNTAIN SQUARE
EVANSTON

Telephone for Your Books:
University 1024 Wil. 3700
Rogers Park 1122

CHILDREN'S BOOK WEEK

requires the announcement of the following delightful books.

Goose Towne Tales
Alice Lawton
Crowell Publishing Co. . . . $2.00

Cop—Chief of Police Dogs
Reginald M. Cleveland
Milton Bradley Co. $2.50

The Wind That Wouldn't Blow
A. B. Chrisman
E. P. Dutton $2.50

I Know a Secret
Christopher Morley
Doubleday, Page & Co. . . . $2.00

Gateway to American History
Randolph G. Adams
Little, Brown & Co. $3.00

The Magic Map
Mary Graham Bonner
Macaulay Publishing Co. . . . $2.50

Dr. Doolittle's Garden
Hugh Lofting
Stokes $2.50

The Pioneer Twins
Lucy Fitch Perkins
Houghton, Mifflin & Co. . . $1.75

The Moon's Birthday
Dorothy Rowe
Macmillan $2.00

Letty
Rose Fyleman
Doran $2.00

Everything and Anything
Dorothy Aldis
Minton, Balch & Co. $2.00

CHILDREN'S STATIONERY

Giving a child attractive stationery gives him a pride in letter-writing. A lovely imported box with a striped cover in assorted colors, $1.

Lord's—Books and Stationery
Just Inside the West Davis
Street Door

NEWEST BOOKS AND BOOK REVIEWS

Just Paragraphs

Children's Book Week has come round again bringing with it as it does each year a larger measure of recognition. Now organizations of all kinds, the Boy and Girl Scouts, the Y. M. C. A., the Parent-Teachers Federation, the Women's Clubs, schools, libraries and bookstores are joining in making it a week not only of pleasure but of profit in the furthering of reading and good reading for children.

THE MAGIC CARPET

To attempt to write about children's books for this most important week, Children's Book Week, is like trying to describe the colors of the magic carpet which is waiting and at a signal will carry you away. For such a wealth of interest and talent and—often—genius, has been poured into the making of these books that viewing them in the mass they leave us speechless—with delight. Colorful outer covers, gay unusual illustrations, fine type, these are the clothes in which they come to us. Many dressed thus newly and beautifully are old favorites, hosts of them; of these there is not space to even attempt to speak.

Among the best of the new ones calling for our attention is for example, "The Wind That Wouldn't Blow" by Arthur Bowie Chrisman. Mr. Chrisman last year was awarded the Newbury Medal for the most distinguished contribution to children's literature, his "Shen of the Sea." This

CHRISTMAS GIFT HINTS

Books make fine and lasting Christmas gifts, and it is with that thought in mind that we are pleased to present herewith gift book suggestions compiled recently by Jessie Gay Van Cleve for the American Library association.

For Little Children

- The Lion-Hearted Kitten Bacon
- The Adventures of Andy Bianco
- To and Again Brooks
- Italian Peepshow Farjeon
- A Little Book of Days Field
- Happy hour books.
- The Good-Natured Bear Horne
- Now We Are Six Milne
- Clever Bill Nicholson
- Prancing Pat Orton
- The Popover Family Phillips

For Older Boys and Girls

- The Wind That Would Not Blow Chrisman
- Once in France Clement
- Allison Blair Crownfield
- The Honor of Dunmore Daniel
- Readings De la Marc
- Meredith's Ann Gray
- The Adventures of a Trafalgar Lad Lesterman
- The Trade Wind Meigs
- Children of the Mountain Eagle Miller
- The Jester's Purse Minchin
- Nadita Moon
- Gay-Neck Moon
- Bob North Starts Exploring North
- Downright Dency Snedeker
- Canute Whistlewinks Topelius
- The Wonder Smith and His Son Young

new book has the same charm, the same transforming touch which children's books must have to make them quite worth giving to the best of children.

Another absolute favorite is A. A. Milne's "Now We Are Six." Milne's work is now so famous that it is unnecessary to do more than merely name it and every lover of "When We Were Very Young" will do the rest. This new book, while it may not be quite as spontaneous as that first, is still delightful verse. Mr. Shepherd's drawings could not be improved.

There is a new one of that famous and unsurpassable Oz series, "The Gnome King of Oz." The Scarecrow is his same smiling self and Ozma is as fair as ever in her flowing robes. No child ever tires of these old friends.

Doctor Dolittle, a creation nearly as famous though not of such long acquaintance as the Oz family, has returned in Hugh Lofting's latest book,

In its 80th thousand!

"A Good Woman"

By Louis Bromfield

Don't miss this brilliant novel by the Pulitzer Prize winner, the man whom the N. Y. Times calls "pre-eminently the best and most vital of all the young American novelists."

Frederick A. Stokes & Co. $2.50

DANGEROUS BUSINESS

By EDWIN BALMER

A fast-moving novel of men and women caught in the craze of entertaining for business—with a tremendous climax.

$2.00 DODD, MEAD

CHANDLER'S for BOOKS

The most complete book stock on the North Shore

For CHILDREN

THE GNOME KING OF OZ
A brand new Oz Book to delight children. Quaintly illustrated by John R. Neill.
By Ruth Plumly Thompson $1.60

Nature stories entertainingly told by a famous Brave. Illustrated.
TEEPEE TALES
By El Comancho $1.50

ALICE AND THE TEENIE WEENIES
New adventures among the cunning "littlest people." Illustrated.
By Wm. Donahey $1.00

REILLY & LEE

Chicago New York

Brief Reviews of the Newest Books

by Anne L. Whitmack

The second volume of "Our Times," by Mark Sullivan, is a garrulous account of the customs, fads and fancies of 1904-1908. It is highly amusing.

Sea rovers of all nations have been celebrated in many stirring books. The latest contribution is by Admiral Ballard in his book, "Rulers of the Indian Ocean." It is an absorbing account of Chinese, Arabian and Portuguese sailors.

The psychographic biographies of Gamaliel Bradford are an annual event. He has shown himself a thorough student, as well as a fascinating, polished and vivid stylist in his portrait of D. L. Moody, worker of souls.

Last year Houghton Mifflin brought out "The Heart of Emerson's Journals," edited by Bliss Perry. This year they are bringing out the very pithy and quotable "Heart of Thoreau's Journals," edited by Udell Shepard.

Many books on marriage have been published, and many more will be, but a sane and wholesome discussion has been made by Ernest R. Groves and his wife in their book, "Modern Marriage." They have long been known as very practical psychologists.

Two new biographies have appeared on George Sand. One by Elizabeth Schermerhorn is called "Seven Strings of the Lyre" and the other by Marie Jenney Howe is called "George Sand, the Search for Love." The latter is considered to be the more able biography of a woman who thought and lived a century ahead of her times.

"Doctor Dolittle's Garden." In this the Doctor learns insect language and hears many of the life stories of this interesting and hitherto almost unknown race.

Dhan Gopal Mukerji has another book, "Gay-Neck, the Story of a Pigeon." It is beautifully illustrated and while it has not perhaps quite the new charm of his earlier "Kari the Elephant," it is good reading.

"Teepee Tales" by El Comancho is a real opportunity for children. These are nature stories by a man, adopted by a half dozen Indian tribes, who is a student of nature and of wild things, and who has himself followed all the old trails west of the Missouri.

Another book making information pleasant is "The Earth We Live On" by Elizabeth Duval. It is one of those books which should be so welcome to parents since it answers the kind of questions which they usually cannot answer themselves.

"The Pioneer Twins" is Lucy Fitch Perkins' contribution for the year, an addition to her interesting and really informative "Twins" series. It is a story of pioneering in America in the year '49.

"The Quest of the Sea Otter" by Sabra Conner is an unusually colorful story of adventure for children of a little more advanced age. "The Boy Knight of Reims" by Eloise Lowmsberry, also for older children, is a charming story of long ago.

But enough, we have more than filled our space and though we have only caught feebly at one or two of the colors of the magic carpet we have at least brought it to your mind that it is there.