

Dean of Women Advises Girls Entering College

Mrs. W. G. Richardson, dean of women at Northwestern university, was the speaker at an assembly held last Tuesday morning at New Trier High school. This was one of a series of assemblies given for the senior girls this year.

In view of the fact that the girls were seniors and the majority planning to attend college, Mrs. Richardson chose as her subject, the problems which confront the young girl when she first enters college.

Having come in contact with so many young women and helping with so many problems, Mrs. Richardson was able to discuss with keen understanding and clearness these problems and their solutions.

The greatest difficulty, she said, is to establish the right amount of time to be spent for educational pursuit, activities, and social affairs, and she suggested that the girls think of a right triangle with the three angles representing those three things, and that they try to keep these equal throughout their college careers.

She also spoke of students' attitude toward college when they enter and suggested that if they entered with their motto, "everything to help, and nothing to hinder," their college life would be much happier than if they entered with the wrong attitude.

Mrs. Melville C. Chatten of 1025 Dinsmore road, Winnetka, was one of the hostess regents who assisted at the bridge, musicale, and tea given Saturday of last week in the Gold ballroom of the Hotel LaSalle by the five Chicago chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution for the benefit of the "Million by March" fund for the new national D. A. R. auditorium, Constitution hall, in Washington, D. C.

"We talk of breaking law, we can only break ourselves against it; but if we sin against love we do destroy her: we take from her the power to redeem and sanctify us. Be afraid of the love that loves you, it is either your heaven or your hell" (From last Sunday's sermon).
