Mardi Gras Luncheon Unique Benefit for People of Mountains

The Woman's guild and auxiliary of Christ church, Winnetka, will have a Mardi Gras luncheon February 20-21. Besides a delicious repast there will be a vaudeville program, with stunts between each course. The proceeds of this unique entertainment are not to be used for home needs, but to go to the poor whites in the southern mountains. Nestled at the foot of the mountains are coves, and it is in Roak's Cove, Tenn., some ten miles from Sewanee, where recently a small mission church has been built, that the money from this luncheon is to be used to build a community house where all may gather—the girls for their quilting parties, the boys for games, and where the older folks, with the cove fiddler, may have their quadrilles. Baptist, Holy Roller, Cumberland Presbyterian, and 'Piscopal (as the Episcopalian is called), irrespective of religious creed, may meet in brotherly love for some wholesome pleasure.

Heretofore such a place was unheard of among these poor white people, who live in their one-room cabins on the mountainsides or in coves. Their lives are bare and destitute. They have had few opportunities for bettering their conditions. Until recent years little help has been given these poor mountain whites, and it is only by persistent efforts on the part of the Christian missions that they can be brought to study God's laws and awakened to a desire for better living. Feuds and quarrels are settled with a shot gun. "White lightning," or cove whiskey, plays a great part in their dreary lives. It is through games and sports that the boys and men may learn that there is such a thing as true sportmanship and being a fair loser, without a fight.

This the community house will make possible, bringing new life into the Cove and proving a source of wide influence and benefit to those poor mountain people, so isolated from the valley beyond. The women of Christ church, with the support and co-operation of all the women of Winnetka, will build this hall, which shall stand as a witness to the people's faith in the goodness and loving-kindness of one for another.
