Washington Magazine Lauds Artistry of Mrs. Rathbone

The Wardman Park Vista, a magazine of society in Washington, D. C., possessing the "intimate appeal of the small-town weekly," comments in glowing terms, in its January 15 issue, anent Mrs. Henry Riggs Rathbone, wife of Congressman Henry R. Rathbone of Kenilworth, and a singer and poet of considerable reputation.

"Mrs. Rathbone's diversified talents," reads a paragraph from Vista "have been generously recognized by the music and art loving circles of Washington, and she in turn has been most gracious in giving these talents to the official and residential groups of the city. Possessed of a rarely beautiful voice, ranging from a rich contralto to almost coloratura tones. her singing has been in great demand both at private soirees and at larger functions."

SOLOIST TELLS STORY

Dorothy Speare, who will sing at the twentieth annual festival of the North Shore Music Festival association in May, tells the story of the Washington National Opera company's promotion plan in the February issue of the Pictorial Review. Her Italian debut was also described by her in a recent number of the same publication. Miss Speare will be the soloist Thursday evening, May 24.
