Freshmen Girls Not in Inter-Class Basketball

This year the Freshmen girls at New Trier High school will not have class teams to enter in the inter-class basketball tournament, but will continue with the same teams they now have, and stage a tournament among themselves. The other teams have been picked; a first, second, third, and fourth team from each of the three upper classes. The schedule has been made, and each team will play the other teams in its class three or four times. The tournament will begin Monday, March 5, and the games will be played every Monday and Tuesday. The new system employed this year has been highly successful. It enabled the girls to play more, and therefore learn more about the game, and become better players.

New Trier Club Will Present "The Youngest" By M. B.

"The Youngest," a three-act comedy by Philip Barry, has been selected by the New Trier Dramatic club for its spring play. It will be presented in the high school auditorium Saturday evening, March 17. Students in the cast are: Elizabeth Sanford, Marion McDonald, Faith Burge, Helen Nygaard, Annette Thompson, Dean Vail, Ralph Netterstrom, Leon Dickinson, and William Gibson. They were chosen for their respective parts by competitive try-outs, and are at present hard at work rehearsing in preparation for the evening of the seventeenth.

Further announcements will be made later.

New Trier Lens Club Closes Photo Contest

The "Lens Club" of New Trier High school closed its contest on Thursday, March 1. The contest was started for the purpose of furthering interest in photography, and the only rules were to have entrants take the pictures after the announcement of the contest, and to have the subject "Winter," but as there was no snow for quite a while after the announcement of the contest, the subject was changed to that of any "landscape." Now that the contest has closed, both subjects have been accepted. The winning picture will be printed in the New Trier News. Pictures receiving honorable mention will be exhibited in the case in the main hall of the school.

Little Girl Plays Difficult Part at Children's Theater

The longest and most difficult role ever played by a child in the Children's theater falls to Mary Frances Dodd, who will play the name part in "The Poor Little Rich Girl" at Haven school theater, Evanston, March 10 and 17.

With a larger background of training and experience than is usual to the eleven-year-old child, Mary Frances was chosen from the dramatic department of Haven school as the child best able to carry a part which keeps her on the stage during three-fourths of a three-act play and demands much in the way of acting ability. The second act, in which every character must play his part, not realistically but as he appears to Gwendolyn in her troubled dreams, is especially imaginative and difficult.

An excellent cast of dramatic students from the School of Speech plays the remaining parts of the play, with the exception of that of the Teddy Bear who comes to life in the second act. This part is played by William Prizer of Haven school. Howard Berolzheimer of the faculty of the School of Speech plays the doctor who brings Gwendolyn through the illness which endangers her life. Lauren Wood plays her father and Eleanor Luse her mother. Miss Luse will be remembered for her excellent playing of the queen in "Ten Minutes by the Clock."

Two Evanston girls, Maryan McClelland and Josephine Nicoll, play the governess and the French teacher. Clarence Westerlund is the Italian organ-grinder who becomes, in her fancy, the man who makes faces. Laura Sanders is Jane, the nurse, who gives Gwendolyn the overdose of sleeping medicine. Merle Ploghoft is Thomas, the footman, who has an exciting duel in her dream with the King's English. Dick Rose, Eunice Stoddard and Frances Hollinger are the music and German teachers, Herbert Curry is Potter, the butler, and Ruth Tarrant, Winnie Mae Crawford and Edward Crowley are the dinner guests.

Mrs. Clarence Goodman, 519 Sunset road, returned home from Florida yesterday, after a stay of two weeks. Her niece, Miss Maxine Salinger, who when down with her, is remaining there for two months.
