New Hahn Quarters Inspire Big Boost in Firm's Business

After moving into one of the finest real estate offices of its size anywhere in the metropolitan district, John F. Hahn, Inc., experienced a decided stimulus in its business and boosted its last month's sales total to within striking distance of the half million mark. The Hahn organization moved into its new quarters a little over two weeks ago after occupying temporary quarters in the Church street building for nearly a year while the Hahn building was under construction.

The new offices have fully 50% more floor space than the old and all departments have been much more efficiently arranged. The renting and sales departments occupy the south half of the office, while the north half is given over to the insurance and loan departments and the cashier.

The Hahn office occupies half of the Sherman avenue frontage of the new $400,000 building and uses nearly 3,000 feet of space. It is finished throughout with walnut woodwork and antique ivory walls. The ceiling and column capitals are decorated in modified baroque. There are six private offices in the new establishment. Four of them are occupied by the officials of the firm, John F. Hahn, president; Garfield Anderson, vice president; William S. Cochran, secretary, and Emil R. Zillman, treasurer. One is used as a conference room and one as the auditor's room.

All the private offices are furnished with walnut desks and attractive leather upholstered chairs. The reception lobby is provided with similar chairs.

The office is equipped throughout with the latest devices for the rapid and efficient handling of business. All of the equipment is new and fully adapted for rendering the best service to the customers of the firm. One of the special equipment features is the Dictograph system of inter-communication. One of the dictograph units is within the reach of every person in the office. Three master stations in the offices of the president, vice president and secretary, are equipped with loud speaking devices so that the use of a receiver or transmitter is not necessary.
