Children's Theater Staff Prepares for Staging of "Aladdin"

Easter vacations being unknown in Arabian Nights tales, Aladdin and his beautiful princess, the Sultan, the African magician, and others rehearsed faithfully through the vacation period for the Children's theater production of "Aladdin," which will be given at Haven school theater, Evanston, April 25 and May 5.

At the same time fascinating scenes were being designed for the production by Dean Farnsworth, while Lillian Anderson, costume manager, was doing research work at the Art institute and the public library for Oriental costume illustrations.

Children's Favorite Actor

Clarence Westerlund, who has already made a name for himself on the campus as an actor of unusual ability, will be the Aladdin of the production. The children remember with delight his playing as the Italian organ-grinder in "The Poor Little Rich Girl" Elinor Rice, dramatic director at Roycemore, will play the beautiful Princess Badroulbador. Miss Rice was the first heroine of the Children's theater, having won the hearts of all the children by her playing of the lovely Snow White in the opening production two seasons ago. Later, she played Morgiana in the pantomime, "Ali Baba."

Appearing with the Children's theater for the first time will be Joe Shikany as the African Magician, Alvin Krause as Aladdin's mother, and Sydney Spayde as the Sultan. Two comedy parts which have been written into the dramatization by Theodora DuBois, the author, are Aladdin's uncle and aunt. These parts are played by Dick Rose, the plumber in "The Poor Little Rich Girl" production, and Pearl Allen, who has appeared in many comedy roles, the last being the philosopher in "The Make-Believe Gentleman."

Wave Richards, who was Beauty in "Beauty and the Beast" last season, will play Jullanar, a little street waif. Dick Hadley will be the Genie, the slave of the lamp. A group of children from the public schools will play a number of minor parts in the play.

The property at 1104 Lincoln avenue, Highland Park, consisting of a seven-room New England farm house type of residence on grounds 62x280, was sold to Charles F.
