

Northwestern University Students Hear Lecture on Oriental Rugs

Art students of Northwestern university were given an opportunity to study the famous exhibition of rare antique Oriental Rugs at Lord's, under the expert instruction of Mr. S. K.

Jorjorian, manager of Lord's Rug department. The students are seen sitting on the famous $10,000 Yezd Palace Carpet, which took twelve years to weave, and was made for one of the former Shahs of Persia. It is 26x16 feet. The upper quarter of the rug is seen in the upper left hand corner of the picture. Mr. Jorjorian is seen exhibiting a very fine silk Kashan rug, and explaining the symbolic meaning of its colors and designs.

Lord's is offering the entire collection for sale this week.
