

GIVEN POSTER PRIZE

Wilmette Art Student Gets Award from Directors of Arden Shore

"Make his dream come true," pleads the poster which won first prize of $25 in the annual Arden Shore poster contest for Edward Ryerson of Wilmette, a student at the Evanston Academy of Fine Arts.

The poster depicts a street urchin with his dog, somber against a city fire plug, dreaming of the brilliant background which shows a beach scene at the Shore with children frolicking along the lake sands. The poster was made without models and is considered by school authorities unusually well done.

The second prize, $10, went to Miss Harriet Woodcock of Wilmette, for her "Help her to happiness" poster, showing a dejected little girl seated in "ash can alley" on rickety steps. The third prize of $5 was awarded Russell Johnson of Evanston. His slogan is "Give him a vacation, too," and his presentation is that of a newsboy wistfully watching the departing vacationists in a railway station. Honorable mention went to George Bolton of Evanston and William Grover of Chicago.

The 35 posters entered in the contest will be exhibited in Evanston and the North Shore towns appealing for aid for Arden Shore. The spring campaign for funds has been opened recently all along the north shore.
