

House-Warming Extraordinary

When Mr. and Mrs. Roy M. Kirtland gave a house-warming and bridge party Saturday evening, May 5, to open their new home at 420 Washington avenue, Wilmette, they didn't make it a conventional affair. It was indeed quite a "surprise" party because, unknown to the guests, two professional entertainers had been engaged, one of them taking the part of a waiter, whose pranks while serving were both bewildering and amusing to the company. After refreshments had been served, the secret came out in a humorous dialogue between Mr. Kirtland and the alleged waiter, who, then, with his partner, entertained the company with skits and songs into the wee sma' hours. The forty guests who enjoyed the evening, which was so well filled with merriment were:

Mr. and Mrs. George Bassler, Mr. and Mrs. Don Rennolds, Mr. and Mrs. William Wischart, Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Youngberg, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Burlingame, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Rennolds of Wilmette; Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Callerman of Winnetka; Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Smith of Racine; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph C. Church, Miss Evelyn Fenner, Dean L. Traxler, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Davidson of Evanston; Mr. and Mrs. Earl A. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Kohler, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Saffon, Judge and Mrs. Edgar A. Jonas, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin S. Livingston, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Marshall of Chicago.

Ventilation for Kitchen Becomes of Big Importance

Inventors have been turning their attention to this keeping of a kitchen free from cooking odors and greasy fumes, and making it a healthy, comfortable place to work in for nearly a decade now.

It was about ten years ago that the electric exhaust fan was first offered to the public. Since that first introduction there have been many different developments of this same idea, the kitchen ventilator finally becoming as it is now, an accepted feature of a large number of houses.

One particularly interesting ventilator on the market comes in a neat, compact little cabinet with a glass door. In this cabinet an electric exhaust fan is installed.

Where the house is already built, the cabinet can sit snugly in an opening cut out of the wall; or where the house is in process of construction, the cabinet can be built right into the wall.

Connection is made with the electric current, the fan starting when the door is opened and closing when the door is closed. The operation is automatic.
