N. U. School of Speech Offers Unique Courses

Instruction designed to train students to conduct a children's theater similar to the one which has been so successful in Evanston the last two years, will be given in the summer session at Northwestern university by the school of speech, pioneer in the field of creative dramatics for children. This will be the first time such instruction has been given in any university.

The course will be a practical laboratory in organizing, managing and directing a children's theater and in staging plays. The problems of such a theater will be worked out by the production of A. A. Milne's whimsical "Make-Believe," which has an especially strong appeal for children. The course will be under the direction of Miss Winifred Ward, director of the Evanston children's theater and an instructor in the school of speech, and Dean Farnsworth, also of the school of speech faculty.

Another course to be offered by the school of speech will be creative dramatics for children for those who wish to prepare themselves to direct the dramatic work for children in public schools or elsewhere.
