HAVE HEALTH EXHIBIT

Dr. Isaac D. Rawlings Will Have Health Circus, Baby Conference at Illinois State Fair

A health circus, a baby conference, and a school of instruction for health and sanitary exposition that will cover 10,000 square feet of floor space at the Illinois State Fair, according to Dr. Isaac D. Rawlings, State health director, who declares that this project which annually attracts thousands of visitors will be more interesting and educational this year than ever before.

"The health circus is as ingenious as it is new," said Dr. Rawlings. "Daily performances at the Fair in a regular circus tent will not only provide instructive entertainment to thousands of visitors but will demonstrate to teachers, club women, health workers and others from the far corners of the State a new and captivating device that may be scheduled for use in any locality that wants it."

"The school of instruction for health and welfare workers is a new venture. Courses in sanitation, relating to milk, water, nuisances, sewage, mosquitoes, etc.; epidemiology, relating to quarantine, laboratory service, medical inspection, record keeping and the like; maternity, infant and child hygiene; health educational methods; and social hygiene will be offered. Classes will be held each day from August 19 to 24. On the faculty are the division heads and others from the State department of health, Dr. Lloyd Arnold of the faculty of the medical school of the University of Illinois, Dr. N. O. Gunderson and Dr. John W. H. Pollard, health officers respectively of Rockford and Evanston, A. L. Bowen, editor, Illinois State Journal and others. More than 100 health officers and nurses have registered for the course.

"Other features include a 'Bug House,' the mystery shack, to which thousands of visitors will wander; a motion picture theater with a continuous performance where folks may learn while they rest; an observation Pullman speeding along through healthland and an ingenious mechanical model that visualizes the average length of life in former years as old dobbin plugging along and that of today as an automobile dashing past over a longer span.

"The whole project is meant to introduce the man in the street to modern hygienic and sanitary possibilities and to suggest the importance of preventive medicine to successful living."
