

Villages to Fight Thistles Without Aid of Township

According to a decision recently received from the office of the state's attorney, the jurisdiction of John Balmes, officially designated as township thistle commissioner, the man whose duty it is to seek out and exterminate Canada thistles in the township, does not extend into the incorporated villages in New Trier.

His duties are limited to the portions of the township which are without the villages, which, since the large annexations of territory by many of the villages, does not include a very large area.

This interpretation of the law was read at the meeting of the auditing board of New Trier township Monday evening. Last year the township expended something like $1,500 for cutting thistles, about $500 of which was collected from property owners on whose premises the work was done and who, in every instance, are presumed to pay for it, whenever it is possible to collect it.

The various villages have been advised that hereafter they will be required to attend to cutting Canada thistles within their respective borders, pursuant to the ruling received.

Township Supervisor Gertrude M. Thurston said: "We will be glad to co-operate with the villages in this matter, in any way, if after receipt of our letter, they desire to do so."
