

R. H. Simonds Wins North Shore Title in Horseshoe Tilts

R. H. Simonds and E. C. Salzman, of Wilmette, were defeated by Windelborn and Lindberg, of Evanston, in the finals of the doubles competition at the annual north shore horseshoe pitching tournament sponsored by the Evanston Recreation board. The scores were 21 to 13 and 21 to 17. Games were played at Lake Shore park, Evanston, Monday night.

The singles championship was won by R. H. Simonds Tuesday night when he defeated E. C. Salzman, his doubles partner of the night before, in an uphill battle 3-21, 21-4, and 21-9. Salzman was the winner of the north shore singles championship last year. In playing for the singles title Simonds and Salzman each put out a member of the doubles team which had defeated them Monday night.

Winners of both the singles and doubles horseshoe pitching honors will be rewarded with silver loving cups.

An interesting match is expected next week when Simonds and Salzman will meet again to decide the horseshoe pitching championship of Wilmette.

Tale of a Cameraman Who Encircled Pole

In 1913 a young Australian cameraman who had seen service all over the continent, in the Balkans during the Turko-Balkan War, in Africa, the West Indies and various tropical countries, was commissioned by the Gaumont company to go with Vilhjalmur Stefansson's Canadian Arctic Expedition to film the expedition and also report its progress to a news syndicate. Young Wilkins did not know who Stefansson was; but the expedition sounded like good fun. And he had never been in the Arctic. He went along.

The record of Sir George Hubert Wilkins' life and flight over the top of the world will be published by Putnam's in July, under the title "Flying the Arctic."
