SOLDIERS' MEMORIAL

Kenilworth's New $60,000 School Addition to Include Gymnasium Dedicated to War Heroes

"Kenilworth Memorial Gymnasium" is the inscription to be cut into the stone above the entrance of Kenilworth's new $60,000 gymnasium, construction of which was started several weeks ago.

That this new addition to the Joseph Sears school in Kenilworth has been designed as a memorial to the soldiers of the community who died in the World war was revealed this week after the drive for the $60,000 necessary to construct the building had reached the $40,000 mark.

The Kenilworth board of education voted to make the new gymnasium a memorial several weeks ago when it felt sure that the campaign for funds to pay for the building would be successful. John K. Byrne, who is directing the campaign, believes that with the return of vacationists the remaining $20,000 can be raised.

Meantime the board of education has ordered the construction work on the gymnasium to go ahead. The masonry work on the unit will be ready soon, and it is hoped that the interior can be finished and equipment installed immediately after the completion of the exterior work.

In addition to the inscription above the entrance to the new gymnasium, there will be a bronze frieze on the inside of the building containing the names of all Kenilworth boys who fought in the war.

The main Joseph Sears school addition is also rapidly nearing completion. Plasterers were busy there this week. Since this part of the school plant will not be ready in time for the opening of school next week the kindergarten and first four grades will be placed in temporary quarters.
