Journalists Return from Summer Tour of European Countries

The Blue Pencil club, a group of traveling journalists and their friends from the Medill School of Journalism of Northwestern university, has returned from a summer's tour of Europe in search of copy. Their weeks abroad took them to many of the English and continental newspaper plants.

Among the prominent newspapermen who were hosts to the club were Sir John Findlay, publisher of the Scotsman, Edinburgh; Stewart Hodgson, editor Daily News, London; Mr. Vandersleyn, delegated publisher of Neptune, Antwerp. While in Cologne the party was taken through the Press exhibition and was entertained by the management of the exhibition and the officials of the city. A. Stoklitzky, press chief of the Council of Soviet Commissaires of Russia, guided the club through the Soviet Russian exhibit at the Pressa.

Under the direction of Prof. Leland D. Case of the Medill school and Harry Hillman of Wilmette, for many years editor-in-chief of the Inland Printer, the party's itinerary took them to places of literary and journalistic interest in England, Scotland, Holland, Germany, Switzerland and France where the tour ended in a week's visit of Paris.

Among the members of the group were the Misses Jane and Avis Hillman, Miss Lois K. Stewart, all of Evanston; Miss Sarah Mitchell, instructor at Roycemore; Miss Agnes Biesemeier, Northwestern graduate; Miss Martha Crane, Miss Ida May Hazenhyer, Miss Ruth Gillan and Maurice Miller of Medill.
