ARDEN REOPENS OCT. 1

Winter Camp Will Take in Underfed Boys Forced to Leave School

Preparations for the winter season at Arden Shore, haven for children and mothers in need of sunshine, got under way immediately after the closing of the summer camp two weeks ago and are being rushed for the opening of the winter camp around Oct. 1.

Undernourished boys between 13 and 17 who have been forced to leave school and need work to help their families are given healthful days during the winter at Arden Shore. They are youngsters found by the boards of education when they request certificates permitting them to work, youngsters who are evidently physically unfit to do so.

They are given days of outdoor play, balanced diets, rest, recreation and vacation at the camp to put them into fit condition to work.

All the open-air shacks are being closed in, buildings are being repainted and the entire camp is being cleaned for the opening of the season.

This year's charity ball which the Chicago Arden Shore committee gives each year will be held Nov. 30 at the Palmer house. Plans for the affair, which always draws a large patronage from Evanston, will be discussed Monday at a meeting in the Ambassador hotel.
