

HUGE CROWD EXPECTED FOR OPENING OF PLANT

Ceremony Will Attend Event at $32,000,000 Sewage Disposal
Unit on McCormick Road

Before a crowd which is expected to total 20,000 from Illinois and several surrounding states, the sanitary district will formally open the north side sewage treatment plant at Howard street and McCormick road at a public ceremonial next Wednesday afternoon at 2.

Eminent sanitarians, engineers, public health authorities and representatives of federal and state governments are expected to attend. The plant has attracted world-wide attention because of its magnitude, and the event is expected to bring scientific men from many distant places.

Noted Men to Speak

The actual starting of operations in this $32,000,000 unit on its 100-acre site will be visible to the thousands of spectators. Pres. T. J. Crowe and other sanitary trustees will officiate and there will be addresses by celebrities of the professional world and public life.

Use of the Televox, or mechanical man, is to be made in placing the gigantic plant in operation. This recent invention, a robot capable of obeying spoken commands, has been provided for the occasion by the Westinghouse Electric company.

An outdoor platform is being erected at the plant, just north of the pump and blower house, which fronts on McCormick road, as the stage for the first portion of the ceremony. Following the program of addresses, which will be radio broadcast over Westinghouse Station KYW, President Crowe will officially place the plant in operation. An inspection of the buildings and aeration tanks, in which the entire assemblage will join, will be followed by a buffet lunch, furnished by the contractors who built the plant.

Public Is Invited

Special auto parking facilities and other measures for the convenience of spectators have been taken. The public generally is invited to attend. Engineers from the Sanitary district staff will act as guides.
