

Herbert Kirschner Gives Violin Recital at School

Herbert Kirschner, internationally known violinist, was to give the first of a series of five concerts being sponsored by the Music Fund in Boston at the Skokie school yesterday. Mr. Kirschner, who has studied under Leopold Auer and Carl Flesch in Europe, was formerly concert master of the Herford State Symphony orchestra and also of the Hanover State orchestra. The second concert, the date for which has not been announced, will be presented by a quintet of artist singers under the direction of Eric de Larmarter, assistant director of the Chicago Symphony orchestra and organist and musical director at the Fourth Presbyterian church, Chicago.

Public Forum

Editor, WINNETKA TALK:

I happen to have an aunt who is very articulate about Al Smith. She sways crowds with her enthusiasm... or, at least, so I read in the papers a few days ago. At any rate, I envy her the emotional release of being able to get up and shout from the rooftops: "I'm voting for Al Smith, and I'm terribly proud to be voting for Al Smith."

There is a certain lift, an exhilaration about this man Al Smith that is thrilling the nation now as they have not been thrilled since first Armistice Day. In voting for him, we are not committing ourselves to the platform of a political party so much as to an attitude toward life. It seems to me that with his charm, his engaging honesty, and above all, his "flair for reality" he is more an artist than a politician, or, in other words, an artist of politics.

But I am not writing this letter to try to convince anyone of my own ideas (which are usually flighty). I am writing it to ask the readers of this newspaper to look up an analysis of the deeper influences in the election published in the October 31 New Republic called "Why I Am Voting For Al Smith" by Felix Frankfurter. He presents eight brilliant and profound arguments for voting the democratic ticket this fall. I have no space to even enumerate these issues but the article as a whole leaves us with the vivid picture of Al Smith as a great political educator... a man who is not only passionately interested in reform but who also possesses the "power of presentation and persuasion to win the indifferent and haughty to such reforms."

This admirable article includes a quotation from Emerson, which, in defining the character of Al Smith, pays him a great tribute; the greatest perhaps that has been paid to any man in public life with the single exception of Abe Lincoln. May I quote Emerson's well known words which, according to Mr. Frankfurter, find illustration in the democratic candidate for President of the United States:

"It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after our own; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude."
