

LECTURE ON RELIGION

Philosophers Discuss Subject in Series of Talks on McKinlock Campus

The philosophy of religion is the subject of a series of lectures being given in Wieboldt hall on the McKinlock campus of Northwestern university. Six philosophers and theologians are speaking during the series, the second of which will be given this evening by Prof. Edward S. Ames of the department of philosophy of the University of Chicago. He will speak on "Religious Knowledge and Practice."

Dr. Frederick S. Grant, president of the Western Theological seminary, will give next Thursday's talk on "The Philosophical Study of Religion," and following will be these speakers: Nov. 22—Dr. Alban G. Widgery, Stanton lecturer on the philosophy of religion, Cambridge university, "Towards a Constructive Philosophy of Religion"; Dec. 3—Prof. M. C. Otto of the department of philosophy of the University of Wisconsin, "Present Crisis in Religion"; Dec. 10—Prof. Edward L. Schaub of the department of philosophy of Northwestern, "The Unknown God."

Open to Public

The lectures start at 7:30 p. m., and are open to the public. Limited capacity of the conference room makes it necessary to make reservations in advance.

Last Thursday Dr. Henry N. Wieman of the divinity school of the University of Chicago was heard on "The Philosophy and Method of Worship," in the first lecture of the series.

Science cannot give modern man an accurate knowledge of God, because the sciences are to limited in scope he declared. "However, religion must make use of a rough form of the scientific method in gaining knowledge of God, and it must draw upon the findings of the several sciences so far as they are revelant.

God as a Natural Process

"God must be sought in nature, for when nature is rightly conceived we see that God is a natural process, just as is human personality and the mental life of man.

"Worship is the method by which man tried to reconstruct and adapt his personality to the integrating process of nature, so that the highest values can be achieved in human existence."

Maroons-Badgers Clash at Madison This Week

Having demonstrated against Penn their ability when they are at approximately full strength, the Maroons this week will meet the strong Wisconsin team at the Badger Homecoming at Madison. This is the first time since 1912 that Chicago has played at Madison, for Wisconsin annually made the trip to Chicago. Next Saturday the Maroons close their season with their annual battle with the Illini. This game will be played on Stagg field.

The Stagg eleven played by far its best game of the season against Penn, and only its own bad judgment cost a tie at the worst. The Maroons were fortified with several of the men who have been injured during the past three games, having Van Nice, Leyers, and Weaver ready for the game. Raysson, a star back, will be able to play at Wisconsin, and Stagg will have the greatest strength he has had this year.

IN RECITAL SUNDAY

Mieczyslaw Ziolkowski, pianist, will appear in recital at the Playhouse, Chicago, Sunday afternoon, November 11. The program is given under the direction of Bertha Ott, Inc., recital impressarios. The hour will be 3:30 o'clock.

Swim Classes for Grade Pupils Open at New Trier

The fall and winter swimming and diving classes at New Trier High school start this Saturday, November 10, when boys and girls six years of age and older will meet in the gymnasium for preliminary instructions. Edgar B. Jackson, who has had charge of all the swimming teams and swimming activities of the high school for more than ten years, will be in charge.

Fall and winter swimming for grammar school pupils grew into popularity a few years ago when classes for this age were first started. The following children's classes are announced for this season, all of them to be held in the New Trier High school natatorium on Saturday mornings: boys at 9 o'clock, girls at 9:45 o'clock, and little "tots" at 10:30. The swimming lessons are so arranged that new pupils may join any Saturday by registering in the old gymnasium building.
