

SANTA WILL BRING GIFT TO HOUSEHOLD

Custom of Giving Something a Little Practical With the Frivolous Growing

Jingle Bells. Jingle Bells! not so long now until the radio will tell us that Santa is approaching by reindeer. It is difficult to pick out what one will give the family, so the nice custom of giving something to the houses which everyone can enjoy is growing. A new acquisition to the list of household utilities not in the possession of everyone is the little electric motor for the kitchen. All sorts of attachments may be purchased for this motor as well as attractive cabinets in which to store the equipment. when the cook has this first assistant, it is not necessary for the housekeeper to worry about the frequent calls for hot breads, the large number of guests coming for the weekend, or the other demands of a large or small family.

The new card tables and folding chairs are a joy to the person who occasionally needs an extra work table as well as the bridge lover. The tables are steady and excellent to work on because of this stability.

Among the little things brother and sister can give to the house is a canvas wood carrier for the open fire place, a special fruit juice squeezer, or a luggage stand for the guest room. The lazy man might buy himself a present of an automatic window closer which acts like an alarm clock.

Bath towel sets, a mat, six face cloths, and a bath towel all monogrammed with two or three initials make a fine present as does one of the spongy rubber mats with decorative flowers in other colors. A new shower curtain

The closet might get a Christmas present of a shoe and hosiery box all dressed up in the latest colors. Madame knows now how to take care of these small closets and how to make the most of them. Two articles find space where but one was before.
