IN THE ARCTIC

"THE CRUISE OF THE NORTHERN LIGHT"

By Mrs. John Borden
 MacMillan Co.

Envy is the unholy passion stirred in one's heart by this book of Mrs. John Borden's, "The Cruise of the Northern Light." Every time Mrs. Borden speaks of the strange beauty of the Arctic which one must see to realize, one is envious. Even the dangers of hidden snags, the exhaustion of long hunts after seemingly non-existent bears, the chance of being caught in the Ice Pack, a "hideous night" of a hurricane deter one not a bit from wishing one had been along.

It was such a delightfully "once upon a time" thing to do, to fit up a private yacht with every necessity and convenience and sail from San Francisco on April 21, 1927, on pleasure and adventure bent, incidentally to pick up some polar bears, wild flowers and things for the Field Museum.

Mrs. Borden tells the story of their adventures interestingly, and with the conscientious accuracy and fidelity of a ship's log. While this quality would not be a recommendation for most stories, perhaps, it adds to the reality of this one, it makes us feel that we were almost there. The book is profusely illustrated with excellent pictures taken by the photographers of the party.

JUST PARAGRAPHS

It is said that five dollars is paid to anyone finding a typographical error in the Oxford Bible. If this could be extended to all books it would be a gold mine. Comparable to the idea of the frog in "Cinderella's Garden" who says "all the people I meet are just crazy to write. Now—this is the clever part—let them do it, only they won't be paid. We're going to pay the readers." It seems as if something like this should be done.

An investment which ought to appeal to hard headed business men is the new anthology of the world's poetry which has been compiled by Mark Van Doren. For Mr. Van Doren states that the collection "represents at least five thousand dollars worth of poetry" should the books containing the individual poems be printed separately. This is putting poetry on a business basis.

Miss Gordon Thankful for Upholding Dry Law

An expression of thanks for the endorsement of the 18th amendment, given by Miss Anna Adams Gordon of Evanston, world president of the W. C. T. U., was included in the two pages of such expressions of thanks voiced by celebrities all over the United States and printed in the issue of the Christian Science Monitor of the day before Thanksgiving.

Miss Gordon made the following statement:

"I am devoutly thankful for the patriotic indorsement on Nov. 6 of the Eighteenth amendment to the Federal constitution—a triumph for the principle of prohibition, world-wide in its beneficent influence.

"I am thankful I live in a republic where women are citizens who, in a political crisis, are willing to place principle above party that the homes of our Nation may be supremely blessed.

"I am thankful for the signing by 61 nations of the peace pact, which bids fair to become a path of world peace."

Elect 1929 Purple Captain at Alumni Dinner Saturday

Election of next year's football captain and the awarding of letters to varsity men and numerals to freshmen, will feature the annual football jamboree to be held by the Northwestern university club of Chicago at the hotel Sherman, Saturday night, December 8. Several thousand Purple alumni will attend the banquet. Music will be supplied by the Northwestern band of 150 pieces.

"ORIGINS OF THE WAR"

Who was primarily to blame for the ruin wrought by the World War? The revelations from the German secret archives have opened to historians invaluable material on the history of Europe from 1871 to 1914. These new documents, together with recently published records from Russia, Austria, and other countries, and the flood of memoirs of leading statesmen, have made possible a fresh and more accurate survey of the underlying causes of the War. Sidney B. Fay, Professor of Modern European History in Smith College, now analyzes all this new material in two volumes entitled "The Origins of the World War." His conclusions have been eagerly awaited.
